KAISER ABDICATES

Paris, Nov. 9---It is announced officially in the Chamber of Deputies that the Kaiser abdicated today.

The armistice terms laid down by Marshal Foch are now believed to be before the Kaiser at Spa in Belgium for acceptance or rejection. The seventy-two-hour time limit set for decision one way or the other expires next Monday morning at 5 o'clock (Boston time). Marshal Foch granted that much time to the Germans: They did not ask for it. On the supposition that the courier bearing the armistice terms to Spa has arrived, the next question is: "How long will it take for the Germans to decide and what will their answer be?"

Announcing An Increase In Price

¶ Beginning with the editions of Friday, November 15, the price of the Boston American will be 2 cents.

¶ This announcement, we are sure, will come as no surprise to our readers. It is in compliance with the expressed desire of the War Industries Board, to help conserve newsprint and is necessary because of the increased cost of everything which enters into the production of a newspaper.

¶ Newsprint paper alone has doubled in cost and is still increasing. Labor costs have also increased greatly and, in fact, all material that goes into the making of an up-to-date newspaper costs much more today than at any time in the history of American publishing.

¶ The Boston American believes that its readers will appreciate that the advance in price is made absolutely necessary as a result of conditions over which it has no control and feels confident that its large number of readers will continue to support it as loyally in the future as they have in the past.

FOCH MAY REWORD TERMS

By International News Service.

Washington, Nov. 9.—Field Marshal Foch has the power, should he believe it wise, to make changes in the general phraseology of the armistice terms which he delivered to the German plenipotentiaries.

His authority, however, does not go to any change in the terms themselves. They are absolute and not subject either to debate or modification. State Department officials volunteered this information today when asked why the actual terms of the armistice are withheld.

The copy of these terms is now in possession of the State Department, after having been approved by President Wilson. Granting authority to change the wording of certain clauses was that Field Marshal Foch might be able to meet any anticipated request of the German delegates, according to the understading here. Meanwhile, the State Department has no word of the progress of the negotiations.

The belief that the actual decision, whether to accept or reject, would not reach this country until tomorrow at the earliest was growing in official circles, although admittedly there was nothing official to base it on.

The opinion is held in Washington, according to a dispatch from that city today, that the German decision would not be back in the hands of the German armistice plenipotentiaries before tomorrow. This opinion is also shared by Paris officialdom.

The armistice envoys are assembled in a peaceful chateau near Senlis, 32 miles northeast of Paris, according to the Paris Echo. Captain Holdorff, the armistice courier, according to a wireless message from General von Winterfeld of the Teuton plenipotentiaries to his principals, crossed the battle lines between 1 and 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon (Boston time) on his way to Spa, which is 122 miles over the road from La Capelle, where the German plenipotentiaries were met by the French escort.

German wireless dispatches to London report that the armistice question rests upon decision of the Kaiser and that the Kaiser has refused to abdicate. The German Socialists demanded that he abdicate and that the Crown Prince renounce all right to the succession. The Kaiser is reported in the London message to have said that his abdication would produce anarchy and that he was unwilling to assume responsibility for such a state of affairs or to hand Germany over to the entente.

German interior conditions are more and more disorganized. The Bavarian Diet has deposed King Ludwig III., according to a dispatch from Munich to Basle, Switzerland, and has proclaimed a Bavarian republic for the second largest State in the German Empire.

The revolutionary movement in the maritime cities of North Germany continues to gain in force. These interior disorders, it is believed, will have great weight upon the decision of the Kaiser and the German High Command on the armistice matter.

Moses, Republican, for Senator, by 1,939 votes, on the face of the unofficial returns.

ITALIANS OCCUPY TRUCE TERRITORY

They have broken through the formidable defensive system of the enemy between Chivres and LaRochelle, occupied the town of Lethuel and have broken down the resistance of the Germans along the Suriaut.

GERMAN SOCIALISTS AND RADICALS TAKE CONTROL OF REICHSTAG

INSIST ON PEACE ON THE BEST TERMS POSSIBLE

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Nov. 9.—The German Socialists and the Radicals have taken over control of the Reichstag. Events within Germany are transpiring so rapidly that it is almost impossible to keep up with them.

While the army chiefs at Spa deliberate the armistice terms carried to them by Captain Holdorff, side to General von Winterfeld, and decide what their reply shall be, the developments in Germany are so overshadowing any action they may take.

The reply on the armistice will, of necessity, be on its way back to the French lines within the next few hours. Spa, where German great headquarters is located and where the Kaiser is believed to have taken refuge, is near Liege and about 122 miles by road from La Capelle, where the German armistice envoys are quartered.

The roads are very bad, and traveling, as he was forced to, by night, Captain Holdorff could have hardly reached his destination before daylight today. He would be likely to find the military chieftains waiting for him and an immediate conference would be held. Officials here who are familiar with the situation say that the captain could be expected to leave on his return trip about noon today, and that travel by day, he could make the trip in five hours, although there will be necessary delays in getting through the military lines on the battlefront.

SPECIAL CABLE FOR PRESIDENT.

It was believed here that the reply of the army chiefs would be in the hands of the German plenipotentiaries tonight. It may, of course, be delayed until tomorrow, however, because of a prolonged session of the military conference or for some other impelling reason. There is six hours difference in time between France and the United States and officials began to look for definite results from about noon on today. Meanwhile all developments in the situation will be flashed to President Wilson here by cable. E. M. House, who cable has been set aside for the exclusive use of the President and his personal representative and they are able to communicate on all important matters without delay.

The President has made it very plain that the people of the United States will be kept informed of the big developments. Whether the armistice terms are accepted or whether they are rejected, there will be an official announcement the moment the developments warrant.

Meanwhile, there have been several outstanding developments in the German situation which are very significant. First is the announced resignation of the new Imperial Chancellor, Prince Maximilian of Baden. This resignation was forced by the changed conditions within the empire. Free radicals have taken over control of the Reichstag and under the reform plans which it is claimed were put into effect, they should have the right of selecting their own chancellor. So it is supposed here that this was what was meant by the German telegram that stated the "resignation had been tendered in view of the altered parliamentary situation."

PEOPLE IN CONTROL.

Prince Max had been presented with the ultimatum of the Socialists through Philipp Scheidemann, minister without portfolio, as spokesman of the party. These demands were that the Kaiser abdicate and take with him the crown prince; radical change in the government to make it absolutely responsible to the will of the people; the right of public assembly at all times and withdrawal of their arbitrary power from the military and police.

The demands were followed by the submission of Prince Max's resignation, but whether it has been accepted or whether the Socialists will accept or what their program will be next to insure their political combination that seems to have given them control of the Reichstag is unknown here.

There is a complete censorship of all that is transpiring within Germany and the result is that not even the neutral countries adjacent to the country have been able to get at the exact truth of what is going on.

The second important development is the reported refusal of the Kaiser to abdicate. This is taken to indicate that he will be influenced by the military party. Should he persist in this refusal there is every indication that he and the entire Hohenzollern dynasty will be deposed, although it may take several days before this is brought about. It is very likely, however, that the social strength within Germany is growing by leaps and bounds and that those who oppose it eventually will be crushed.

REPUBLIC IN BAVARIA.

Next in importance are the developments in Bavaria, where the Diet has deposed the Wittelbach dynasty and proclaimed a republic. The Socialists are in absolute control there and similar action is almost certain to be followed by all of the states of South Germany. The Diet declared blankly for acceptance of any armistice terms and he ending of the war on the best attainable terms, and it is reported here to have sent its proposals to all of the Socialist leaders in the various units of the confederacy.

The revolutionary movement in the maritime cities of North Germany continues to gain in force. The Socialist local governments in all these cities are expected to unite with their colleagues of the South with their for the A. E. F. in France has increased to 1,606.

Armistice Limit Is Six Hours Earlier Here Than in Paris

Daylight saving and difference in longitude combine to make the armistice nine limit six hours earlier in Boston than Paris.

Boston gains five hours in sun time and one hour by daylight saving, the latter still being in effect in France.

Theoretically on Greenwich time, being only two degrees and twenty minutes east of Greenwich, making a difference in time of only between eight and nine minutes.

Greenwich time is five hours ahead of Boston time. The armistice time limit expires at 11 a. m. (Paris time). Ordinarily that would be 6 a. m. in Boston. But France is still "saving daylight," so Paris clocks are an hour ahead of their own regular time, which makes 11 a. m. in Paris 5 a. m. in Boston.

(Note—While 11 a. m. Monday is the time limit set by Foch, he can extend the time if he sees fit.)

public would be a certainty in the very near future, according to diplomats here whose sources of information are better than those usually available.

GREAT CRISIS IMPENDING.

In any event the great crisis in the war impends. Should the armistice commissioners wait until the last possible moment before announcing their decision it will be in the hands of the entente allies not later than 11 o'clock (French time) on Monday morning. If they accept there will be prompt action by the allies to prevent any Bolshevik outrages such as plunged Russia into its present chaos. There will, however, be no interference of any sort by the allies with the political changes within Germany. The people there can organize any government they want.

Should the armistice terms be rejected then the war will go on just as at present. The military movements now in progress will make for the complete crushing of the German army if the war continues.

Officials today pointed out that the military operations of the last week have been overlooked in the light of the armistice developments. However, the Germans now have only one of their strategic railway lines, that down the valley of the Meuse, in operation. The line to Metz is under the fire of the American guns, and it has no cross connections with the Meuse route. The Lille and Valenciennes lines are no longer operating, and that which feeds Maubeuge is under British fire.

The mouth of the pocket through which all of the German armies left in France must make their escape from the battering-ram machine of Foch is now less than sixty miles wide, and every hour sees it shortened.

CLEAR HEIGHTS OF MEUSE OF FOE

By International News Service.

Washington, Nov. 9.—The American first army has wrested from the enemy his last hold on the heights east of the Meuse—the scene of the memorable battle of Verdun in 1916. General Pershing reported to the War Department this afternoon in his communique for the evening of November 8.

The troops of this command advanced to a depth of six milometres on a front of fourteen kilometres, taking many towns and villages. The text of the communique follows:

"This afternoon French and American troops operating under the command of the First American Army wrested from the enemy his last hold on the heights east of the Meuse, memorable as the scene of the great battle of Verdun in 1916, and drove him back into the lowlands of the Woevre.

"On a front of 14 kilometres we advanced to a depth of six kilometres, taking Limey, Remirey, Bretheville, Pevuillers, Damvillers, Flabas and other towns and villages.

"Along the line of the Meuse, from Villefranche to Wadelincourt level, artillery and machine gun combats have taken place during the day. Six additional guns of heavy calibre, many more machine guns, 2,000 rifles and a large airplane workshop, captured during our advance west of the Meuse, have been reported.

"In the Woevre, in the front of the Second American Army, our patrols were very active capturing prisoners in the course of several successful enterprises near Lake Lachaussee.

Spa, Where Kaiser Is, Noted Belgian Health Resort

Spa, where the German armistice answer is being considered, is the oldest of the large European watering places. It is a town in the Liege province of Belgium and seventeen miles southeast of Liege. It is situated at the junction of the Spa, Warai and Pichette rivers. Its chief spring is the Pouhon.

Senlis, where the German reply is awaited, is 120 miles southeast of Spa as the crow flies, but much more than that over the shell-cracked roads.

La Capelle, where the German plenipotentiaries are met on the battle front, is about half-way between Senlis and Spa. Senlis is a town in the department of the Oise, France, on the Nonette River, about twenty-five miles north-northeast of Paris. It boasts a twelfth century cathedral and the remains of Gallo-Roman fortifications, whose sixteen towers still show. Senlis has frequently been mentioned in mediaeval history.

GLAD AMERICANS HELPED ITALIANS

Washington, Nov. 9.—Expressing gratitude that the American flag was nobly represented in the great battle won by the Italian army against the Austrians, Baron Sonnino, Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs, today sent a cablegram of appreciation to Secretary Lansing for the message of congratulation the latter sent on the great Italian achievement. Baron Sonnino's cablegram said:

"I am in receipt of the telegram which Your Excellency sent me on the occasion of the Italian victory which puts hors du combat the last and, until yesterday, strongest ally of Germany. I am particularly glad that the American flag was nobly represented in the great battle and am sure that this brotherhood in arms has consecrated on the battlefields that intimate union of cordial friendship which I trust will ever grow stronger between the United States and Italy."

SINGER IS HELD AS RAFFLES IN HOTEL

The Suffolk Grand Jury for the December Superior Court term will consider the case of Fred L. Driscoll, Japanese Garden singer at the Quincy House, whose arrest, the police believe, solves the mystery of an up-to-date Raffles, who has been lotting rooms while hotel occupants dined.

Driscoll was arrested by Special Officers Lawrence Welch and John J. Manning of the Court square station following a ten days' vigil by Welch. Driscoll is charged with breaking and entering and larceny in more than forty counts, the robberies extend over a period of eight months, during which time the hotel management have been completely baffled in their efforts to apprehend the mysterious thief.

So baffling was the mystery that four detective agencies successively put their best men on the case without result. Captain James P. Sullivan then assigned Manning and Welch to the job.

Registering at the hotel and letting it be known that he was a jewelry salesman, Welch kept vigil in his room for four days and nights. His vigil was finally rewarded by catching Driscoll coming out of the room that he is alleged to have robbed.

The police say Driscoll broke down and confessed. A search of his home at Medford is said to have resulted in the discovery of a trunkload of clothing, jewelry, linen, brica-brac, furs and other articles. Including many trinkets and keepsakes, and a trench cap of a major recently returned from overseas.

Driscoll has been employed at the hotel since last February. A month after he came there robberies were reported, causing the arrest of several bellboys under suspicion.

SEDAN FLAMES LIGHTED WAY FOR YANKS

Twenty-two German Divisions Hurled in Vain Against Advancing Americans

By BERT FORD,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the American Army North of Verdun, Nov. 7 (Delayed.)—Twenty-two German divisions (264,000 men) have been thrown into the savage battle on the Meuse River in a vain effort to check the rapid advance of the Americans.

The Yanks started the seventh day of their new drive less than four miles south of the historic city of Sedan, while the French were only slightly less than five miles away and are both driving ahead in a northeasterly direction.

(Since Mr. Ford's cablegram was filed it has been announced that the Americans have captured the western outskirts of Sedan).

The glare from the burning cities of Sedan and Mouzon lighted the way for the advance of the khaki and horizon blue columns during the night.

The Franco-American forces today were less than nine miles from Mezieres, a vital railway junction behind the German front.

The American advance yesterday east of the Meuse River reached a depth of nearly three miles, which was a brilliant exploit considering the difficult character of the terrain and the intensity of the enemy's defence.

Two fresh divisions were thrown into the battle on that side of the river, which is an index of the German desperation.

The Americans have maintained a continuous advance, driving across fortified woods, hills and canals and past the snaky bends of the Meuse River. Marches were encountered and crossed.

At dark yesterday the Yankees reached the western outskirts of Mouzon, which was in flames. The left flank reached Connage.

The enemy's supreme task today was the holding of the heights of the Meuse, which he had retained since 1914.

PARIS EXPECTS REPLY SUNDAY EVENING

By NEWTON C. PARKE,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, Nov. 9.—Germany's reply to the armistice terms will not come before Sunday night at the earliest, it is generally believed in Paris. Meanwhile the parliamentaries are resting at a chateau, which is guarded by Pyench poilus.

In some circles it was believed that the German Chancellor would communicate the conditions of the armistice to the Reichstag at once and rely on their vote authorizing the acceptance of the terms. It was pointed out in this connection that the Kaiser advised the former Czar of Russia to secure the approval of the Duma before his response to the Japanese conditions at the conclusion of the Russo-Japanese war.

The Matin today pictured the Kaiser, the instigator of the war, as seated this morning at German headquarters in Spa. The courier from France brings the terms of the allied armistice terms at the same time that a courier from Berlin arrives with the Socialists' ultimatum.

"If he doesn't capitulate his armies will be crushed, and if he doesn't abdicate his life will be soon in danger," said the Matin. "We wager that he says 'yes' to all and seeks safety in flight."

Erzberger, who is a fluent French speaker, was the spokesman for the German delegates at the conference with Marshal Foch.

YANKEES CUT METZ RAILWAY IN THREE PLACES, SAYS GEN. MARCH

ARMISTICE TAKE HIT SUPPLIES

Chief of Staff Deplores Stoppage of Industry by False Truce Report

Washington, Nov. 9.—The War Department is absolutely without any information as to new orders given to Colonel Edward L. Logan of Boston, General March said today.

By International News Service.

Washington, Nov. 9.—General P. C. March, chief of staff, in reviewing the developments of the week at his conference today, said the Valenciennes-Metz railway was cut in three places during the last week. As a result, the Germans have no lines parallel with their front and only the lateral lines that radiate to the front. There has been an American advance all along the line of more than thirty miles in eight days, a surprising gain.

The German line today, the General said, is now more than 100 miles from Paris. When the present continuing counter-offensive was begun the German lines were less than thirty-six miles from the capital. In July the German armies occupied more than 6,000 square miles of French territory. Today they hold less than 2,500, and this is being constantly reduced.

ANNOUNCES REORGANIZATION.

General March said that there had been reorganization of American army corps recently and gave the following as the present corps commanders:

First Corps—Major-General Dickman.

Second Corps—Major-General George Read.

Third Corps — Major-General John L. Hines.

Fourth Corps — Major-General Charles H. Muir.

Fifth Corps—Major-General C. P. Summerall.

Sixth Corps—Major-General Wright.

Seventh Corps—Major-General C. T. Menoher.

The general said two divisions which are operating with the British merly in the Regular Army, and the in Belgium are the 37th Division, formerly of the National Army. Major-General Farnsworth commands the former and Major-General Johnston the latter.

PEACE RUMOR HELPED SUPPLIES.

Discussing the false reports that an armistice had been signed, General March stated that it had been a very bad thing for the military program. He said that when the news was published in New York all of the stevedores there quit work. They stayed away the rest of the day and most of them remained idle the following day. These men were loading food for the armies overseas and these days food is just as necessary as men, he explained.

The army will have to remain overseas for some time to come, even if an armistice is signed, the general said. Bringing the troops home will seriously strain the available shipping. And a part of the army, at least, will have to stay until peace has actually been effected.

General March had with him at the conference Major-General Omar Bundy, recently recalled from France to assume command of Camp Pike.

It was pointed out this afternoon that if any changes are made in the language of the armistice terms by General Foch there may be a delay in publishing these terms after they are signed. The text now here would not be available, and it would be necessary to await the corrections in the text before any statement could be made. It was also said that undoubtedly, should Marshal Foch believe it necessary, he could extend the time limit given within which the Germans must decide what they are going to do.

WILL ANNOUNCE TROOP PLANS.

General March stated that when the armistice actually is accepted by the many and is formally signed, the War Department will make an official statement covering its plans both as to the withdrawal of troops from overseas, from cantonments, continuation of the draft, etc. But until the armistice is a fact the army will continue to press the war in every way.

Replying to questions, General March gave the following information regarding various army units:

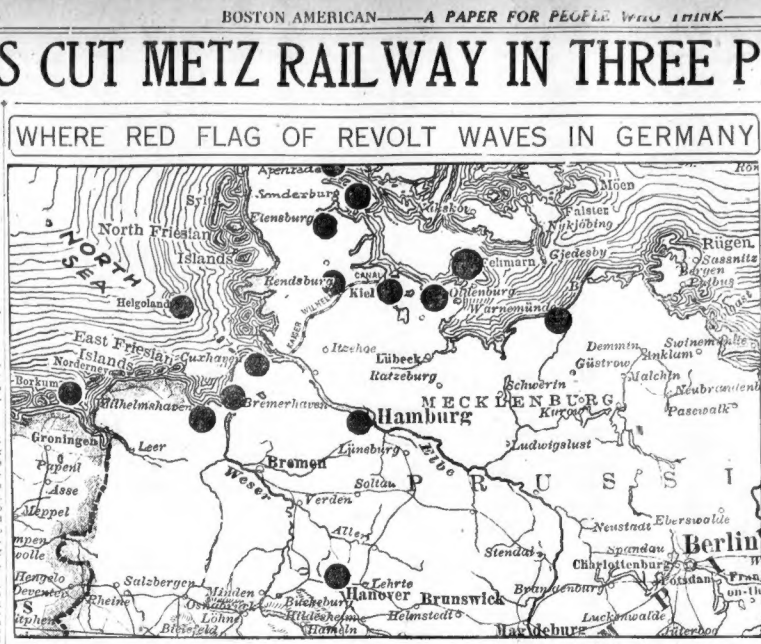
The 351st aero squadron is with an artillery training division and the 88th flines in France; 346th Infantry is part of the 91st division and is in Flanders; 347th Field Artillery is in training in Flanders; 164th Artillery Brigade is part of the 37th division operating in Flanders; 327th Field Artillery is in training in France; 91st division took part in the British drive in Flanders; 43rd Infantry is a replacement unit; 38th Infantry is part of the third division and is in the Meuse; 148th Infantry is now in Flanders; 34th division is with the French fourth army.

The assistant of General Cameron from overseas duty at Camp Gordon does not at present change the assignment of General Sharp, who is now there.

OFFICIAL ELECTION CANVASS DELAYED

The canvassing of the election returns by the Executive Council will begin November 13. Under the law cities and towns have ten days in which to make official returns. In either years the official announcement has been ready by November 28, but the absentee voting amendment, in effect this year, requires the polls to be held open until November 30. It is thought the official announcement will not be ready until the middle of December.

WHERE RED FLAG OF REVOLT WAVES IN GERMANY



The German revolt, starting at Kiel, spread through important coastal points on both sides of the Schleswig-Holstein Peninsula on the Baltic and North Seas. Chief centres of revolt include:

KIEL, where a Soldiers' Council is in control, is Germany's chief naval base on the Baltic, the principal city of the Province of Schleswig-Holstein and the easern gateway to the Kiel Canal.

HAMBURG, where rebels have the upper hand, is a free city on the Elbe River, at the mouth of the Alster, and Germany's leading seaport.

SONDERBURG is on Alsen'Island, just off the east coast of Schleswig, is a naval base, established in 1906. It is now dominated by revolutionaries.

FLENSBURG, where sailors revolted, and where the German Grand Fleet is reported to have arrived after being seized at Kiel, is a port on the East Schleswig coast, at the head of Flensburg Fjord, opposite Alsen Island.

APENRADE, where rebels seized an aerodrome, is fifteen miles north of Flensburg.

WARNEMUNDE, reported under rebel control, is a Mecklenberg port on the Baltic. Delegates on the famous Ford Peace Expedition, traveling overland from Copenhagen south, embarked at Gjedesby on the south coast of Denmark, on the twenty-five-mile ferry ride to Warnemunde. This is called the longest ferry in the world.

RENDSBURG, dominated by revolutionaries, is a Schleswig town on the north side of the Kiel Canal, about twenty miles west of Kiel. Its control by revolutionaries shows how completely they dominate the big inland waterway.

CUXHAVEN, on the western side of the Elbe estuary, is a naval base and submarine nest. As a naval station it guards the North Sea, or western end of the Kiel Canal.

WILHELMSHAVEN, where the red flag of revolution flies over ships and wharves, is the chief naval station on the North Sea.

BREMERHAVEN, on the east shore of the mouth of the Weser River, is an important North Sea port. The workshops of the big North German Lloyd Steamship Company are located there.

OLDENBURG, where the Third Infantry Regiment revolted, is probably the smaller town of that name in Eastern Holstein, on the southeast coast of Kiel Bay. The principal Oldenburg in Germany is the capital of the Duchy of that name on the west side of the Weser.

FEHMERN ISLAND, where revolutionists prepared to engage Imperial troops rushed thither from Kiel, is in the Baltic, just off the eastern tip of Holstein.

HELIGOLAND, which joined the revolt, is the island naval base in the North Sea off the west coast of Holstein. Its powerful fortifications have stood as an outer guard to Germanys North Sea approaches.

BORKUM is one of the islands in the East Friesian group in the North Sea, serving as a naval station in this war.

TILSIT, reported in a London dispatch as seized by rebels, is an important city in the northeastern corner of Prussia, within a dozen miles of the Russian border. Its appearance in the revolution story emphasized the great range of the uprising.

Violent demonstrations have also been reported at interior German points, notably Stuttgart, Munich, Erlangen, Nuremburg and Dresden.

92 CENTS A WEEK FOR 'RIOTOUS' LIVING

Staggering Surplus for Watertown Teachers After Paying Existence Costs

By HAZEL CANNING.

Question—What will she do with the 92 cents?

What one Watertown school teacher will, of course.

What 92 cents? Why, the 92 cents she has left over after she has paid for her board and her washing and her room rent.

Ninety-two whole cents? Left over? Of course, ninety-two whole cents, left over, to buy her candy and her buns and her dresses, best and everyday. To buy her collars, and her gloves, and her silk sweaters, and her Liberty Bonds.

The ninety-two cents which the Watertown primary school teacher has left over every week, after her room is secured, and her breakfast, the ninety-two pay her car fares (they have gone up lately), and her doctor's bills, and her dentist's bills, and her lectures, and her books, and her theatres, and her church assessments, and her thrift stamps, and her—

HERE IS HER STORY.

The Watertown primary school teacher—I hope she is thrifty? Well, just listen to the story of what an excellent job she performs, failing to make both ends meet on the ninety-two cents, and then answer the question for yourself—"Is she thrifty?" So here's the story.

Over in Watertown they pay primary teachers a minimum salary of $600 yearly. They pay them, after four years' service, a maximum salary of $1000.

"But it's hardly enough," said the primary teachers this year, and they got together to make up a budget of weekly expenses. And they had the memorable 92 cents left over. Here are the figures. The budget shows first, a deduction from the $600 yearly of $35 for a teachers' retirement fund. This leaves an actual salary of $565. Divide $565 by the 52 weeks in the year, and it leaves the Watertown primary school teacher a weekly salary of $10.87.

Board in Watertown, when you can get it, the very cheapest to be had, costs $6 a week. A humble room costs at least $2 more, which together make $8. Laundry, enough to enable a teacher to go somewhat dirty all the time, costs seventy-five cents a week.

Which totals $8.75. So you come to the 92 cents surplus weekly. The 92 cents for doctors and dentists and fares, and clothes, and automobile hire, and little pink teas, and Georgette waists at $10, the waist, and trifling little fur coats at $200 the coat—all bought by administering that 92 cents weekly surplus wisely, like a prudent hand maiden, not given to extravagance on 92 cents.

Which is the teachers' case. Which figures will be submitted to the Watertown School Committee at their next meeting. Which, also, closes with a story. For, in Watertown, a girl who had left school in the sixth grade, returned to her teacher, dressed like unto Solomon and his oft-quoted glory.

For the looks of the girl who had left school in the sixth grade were of white, only a little spotted. Her socks were of white. Her suit was tailored. Ready made? Not a bit of it. And feathers—ostrich, they are coming in again—waved in the girl's chapeau. She regarded her plainly dressed, former teacher, companion in her eye.

"I am working in the blanket factory," said she. Dressed Up One. "I make $1a a week."

"QUIT THE BOOKS."

"Do you?" echoed the teacher, admiring wonder in her tones, "$1a a week. Do you. That is more than I make.

"Say, teacher," finished the Fair One, removing her gum, for emphasis, and slapping her teacher on the back. "Hey, teacher—take my advice. Quit the books like I did and come on down to the blanket factory. I'll get you a job. Sure I'm strong with the boss."

Which is another of the reasons why teachers in Watertown are about to ask the school committee for a raise—on that 92 cents.

BISHOP'S HOME HIT BY LENOX GUN BLAST

Lenox, Nov. 9—As a part of the celebration of the false report of German surrender several men, whose names are known, fired an old cannon which had been recently unearthed. A stick of dynamite was played in the cannon and fused. The explosion shattered the cannon, one piece crashing through the house of Bishop Thomas F. Davies, of the Western Massachusetts Episcopal diocese, scattering plaster, pictures and furnishings all over the ground floor, making a wreck of the hall and stairway. The damage was $2,000.

$35,000,000 TO CHARITY BY MRS. SAGE

Estate Left by New York Financier's Widow Is Estimated at Over $75,000,000

New York, Nov. 9.—Between $30,000,000 and $35,000,000 will go to various charities under the will of Mrs. Russell Sage, it was announced by her nephew, H. J. Slocum, Jr. Further than this, details of her bequests have not been given out. The estate totals about $75,000,000, the bulk of which, it is believed, will go to Mrs. Sage's brother, Colonel J. J. Slocum.

Robert W. De Forest, attorney for the estate, refused to confirm any of the reports or divulge the terms of the will. It will be filed for probate next week.

Since her husband's death Mrs. Sage had given away about $35,000,000. She had many pet charities, and her benefactions included the following: To the Emma Willard School at Troy, of which she was a graduate, $1,100,000 in 1907, and in 1917, $250,000; for the establishment of the Russell Sage Foundation, $10,000,000; to Vassar College, $150,000; to Princeton, $250,000; to Cornell, $300,000 for a women's dormitory; to Yale, $250,000; to the Naval Y. M. C. A., Brooklyn, $200,000; International Committee of the Y. M. C. A., $350,000; American Bible Society, $500,000; and many gifts to Harvard College, and various other educational and religious institutions.

She also gave $5 gold pieces every Christmas to all employes of Central Park.

CONTRACT GOES WITHOUT BIDS

The Public Works Department was given permission by Mayor Peters to award a contract without advertising to the T. A. Scott Company of Boston for repairs of a water supply pipe in Boston Harbor. Appointments were approved by the Mayor as follows: Two in the fire department, Frederick J. Harris as cable splicer, and William J. Foster, as chief engineer.

DRAFT WORK TO CONTINUE, SAYS GEN. MARCH

Reports That Induction Would Be Cancelled Are Erroneous, Say Authorities

Draftees will be called, pending an armistice decision, and sent to camp as usual.

This announcement was made today by the Adjutant-General's office, following reports that induction calls would be canceled, on account of peace rumors. Yesterday the AMERICAN announced that no such cancellation was likely.

The office of the Adjutant-General today got into communication with that of the Provost-Marshal-General, Washington, and was informed that drafting of recruits would proceed as usual, and that local boards were instructed to fill calls announced, until orders to the contrary were received from the War Department.

The statement given out by the Boston headquarters is signed by Jesse D. Stevens, Adjutant-General of Massachusetts, and Major Roger Wolcott, officer in charge of the draft. It reads in part:

"This is obviously no time to relax any exertions on account of unconfirmed rumors, and this office relies upon every member and employe of every local and district board in the State to continue his work exactly as if the war were going on for an indefinite period. For all that anyone in this State knows, such may indeed be the case."

NEW MEN'S CLOTHING STORE FOR BOSTON

A new men's clothing store under the name of the Eliot Clothes hop, located at No 708 Washington st the corner of Eliot street was formally opened to the public yesterday. The novel arrangement of the store interior and display windows gives to the shop a dignified but very attractive appearance, pleasing to the eye and good taste. The decorations are in black and white, so that the clothing is effectively displayed under practically daylight conditions. A section of the store is devoted to hats and caps, which are very conveniently displayed by reason of a novel arrangement of the store fixtures. The new shop's location is perhaps better known to the public as the store at Currier's corner.

YANKEES CAUSE FOOD SCARCITY IN FRANCE

Boys Willing to Pay Well, All Available Is Brought Within Battle Zone

The prodigality of the American soldier in France, spending the fattest pay envelope of any fighting man in Europe, is bringing about a food shortage outside the battle zones which is becoming more noticeable day by day. This phase of the food question abroad is touched upon by Herbert Hoover in a letter to Henry D. Endicott, with a view of dispelling the popular impression here that food in France is plenty, an impression conveyed in letters from "across" to the effect that an abundance prevails.

"These letters are written in good faith, am sure," says Mr. Endicott, "but as few of our boys ever get outside the military zone they imagine that what they say is true of France as a whole, and never know what a great wrong they are doing the rest of the country.

"The military zone, a fairly wide belt, is plentifully supplied with food, provided the bays pay well for it—which they do. Because of this condition a phenomenal flow of foodstuffs has come to that zone of France. But it has left the rest of the country drained dry.

"All through the country districts not included in the battle zone the people fare badly indeed. Practically the only food which anyone can afford is bread, for the price of this is kept low by a government subsidy. Bread, however, is rationed, and the ration is far from sufficient to make up for lack of other foods. It is ticketed and still. In many cases the tickets bring in exchange only half the promised outlay. In one village I am told, there recently has been no bread for three weeks, the people eking out their meager dit from farm-selling supplis of potatoes.

"It is we I for the American to think if this when he reads of the plenty which surrounds our boys eld him remember the women and little children in the innumerable towns and villages outside the battle zone. Thinking of their plight, I am sure he will resolve not to slacken one iota in his conservation activities, but rather to enlarge them more and more."

RAZOR BLADES STOLEN; GIRL ACCUSED

Alice E. Shannon Said to Have Acted With Band of Conspirators

That a band of conspirators induced Alice E. Shannon, 18, of No. 17 Hamlin street, South Boston, to steal razor blades from the Gillette Safety Razor factory, First street, South Boston, now under control of the government, where she was employed, was indicated today when she and five others were arraigned before United States Commissioner Hayes. All were charged with conspiring to commit an offense against the government, and in addition the girl was charged with larceny.

The other defendants are Mrs. Mary E. Rich, stepmother of Miss Shannon, who lives at the same address; Louis Stern of Joy street, David H. Woronoff, James M. Kirwen of South Boston, John J. Keegan of South Boston and Leo E. Rice of Malden.

The complaining charges that on September 15 the defendants conspired to defraud the government by stealing blades and selling them. The blades are worth $1 a dozen, and it is claimed were sold for 25 cents a dozen.

The girl is also charged with stealing 600 dozen blades November 3. The girl and boy stepmother were mulled in $1,000. Woronoff was held in $5,000, and the others were held in default of bail ranging from $1,000 and to $5,000. They will be heard November 16.

THREAT TO SHOOT STIRS UP CITY HALL

Alleging that John McDonald had threatened to shoot him and the whole Board of Trustees of the Children's Institution Department at City Hall, Major George Murray, in charge of that department, caused the arrest of the young man.

McDonald went to the department today with a request to meet his sister whom he had not seen for fourteen years.

Questioned by Captain Sullivan at Station 3, McDonald denied threatening anybody. Councillor Daniel J. McDonald and Representative Thomas H. Green of Charlestown, who were in City Hall at the time, and witnessed the scene, went to the station and interceded for the young fellow, who was allowed to go.

"Into a ward of white-washed walls,
Where the dead and dying lay,
Wounded by bayonets, shells and balls,
Somebody's darling was brought one day."

"Oh, that was the heart-breaking part of it all. Somebody's darling! And that somebody was far away.

"He was so terribly torn, this Captain of mine, and they had just operated, without ether. Great beads of perspiration stood out on his face, yet not one sound escaped him.

"All I could do was to take him in my arms, lay his head on my shoulder and hold his hands."

Yes—that was all she could do, this American "war worker" who had been loaned to the medical authorities for service in hospitals at the front. But wasn't it just what his mother would have done had she been there?

Wonderful soldiers of cheer.

To those desolate fields across the sea they have brought the atmosphere of home. And to our weary fighters there—the fatherly, motherly, friendly consolation and comfort so necessary to the maintenance of a war-winning morale.

Give—give more than you ever gave before—to help them carry on.

BIG MEETING TO HONOR WILSON TRIUMPH

Ratification of Election of Walsh in Faneuil Hall Tuesday Night

Ready response met the Boston AMERICAN call for a great ratification meeting in Faneuil Hall on Tuesday night next to celebrate the triumph of President Wilson and Senator-elect David I. Walsh. Already indications are that the historic edifice will see its greatest gathering, both in point of numbers and in intellect as well.

The meeting will be presided over by Mayor Andrew J. Peters. Addresses will be made by Senator-elect Walsh, Congressman-elect John F. Fitzgerald, Congressman James A. Gallivan, if his health permits; Congressman Richard Olney, 3d, if he is in Boston, and Congressman M. F. Phelan, also, if congressional duties permit of it.

At all events, Democracy and the great legion of independent voters who cast their ballots for David I. Walsh, will be at hand and will join in honoring the State's first Democratic Senator since those days prior to the great War of the Rebellion. President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot, of Harvard, Professor Charles Zueblin, noted social worker, and E. A. Filene are among the leaders in independent thought who have been invited to attend.

STATE MAYORS INVITED.

By no means the least impressive feature of the night will be the procession or escort to the victorious candidates and their friends. This procession bids fair to rank with some of those of the earlier days of Democracy in Boston, when torchlight processions were the order rather than a rarity.

Marching clubs from all sections of the city and suburbs have been invited to attend. Music will be provided for the parade and those who are not fully aware that Massachusetts stood behind the President in his appeal will be made fully so on that night.

Invitations have been sent to all the Democratic and Independent Mayors in the State to be present. In addition, leaders in independent movements will lead their followers and their enthusiasm for the occasion. All signs tend to indicate that Faneuil Hall will not be of sufficient size to entertain the vast gathering.

LONG TO BE HONORED.

Richard H. Long, standard bearer of the Democratic party in the State campaign, will be present, and he, too, will be honored. Though defeated by the Cabotonian, Mr. Long made one of the most remarkable runs in the history of the party. Against one of Massachusetts greatest vote getters he polled a truly remarkable vote.

Mr. Long's fellow-townsmen from Framingham have sent word that they would come over to pay honors to their fellow-citizen. Workers from the great shoe factories who took up the Long and their building genius will attend and offer their enthusiastic support to the progress.

The Democracy of the city of Boston will do its full share toward making the night a success. Mayor Peters rolled up an excellent vote for the Democratic candidates and in that fact there is a considerable feeling of satisfaction for all concerned. Boston marchers will be prominent in the line on Tuesday night.

"The AMERICAN'S idea of a ratification meeting," said Arthur P. Gerald, Congressman-elect from the tenth district, "is a move in the right direction. The Democracy of the city and State should feel proud of the fact that it has at last decided to nominate a candidate for Congress one of the members of its party.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO WILSON.

"I shall be glad to attend the meeting Tuesday night and will do all in my power to make it a memorable event. Mr. Walsh is entitled to such a meeting. I have no doubt but that the gathering will be one to warm his heart and make his election seem more triumphant. It seems really a shame that we couldn't be honoring Mr. Long in the same way."

The opinion of Boston's former mayor seems to be the opinion of every person of prominence in the party. Likewise do the independents hold similar ideas. Massachusetts hasn't had a chance to celebrate such a triumph in a long time. As a result, much pent up enthusiasm is bound to turn loose.

To the women of the State who stood so loyally behind the President and did their utmost to accomplish the election of Senator Walsh and Mr. Long an especial invitation is extended to attend.

Senator-elect Walsh, as well as the leaders of the Democratic party, favor suffrage and are extremely grateful to the ladies of the State who aided in the campaign. They ask especially that the fairer sex be represented at the meeting.

EXACT PLANS INCOMPLETE.

The exact plans for the torchlight parade have not as yet been completed, it is thought, however, that the parade will form somewhere in the Back Bay, handy to the Hotel Lenox, and march through several of the downtown streets to Faneuil Hall. Announcements regarding that will be made later. Also complete announcement as to where the various marching clubs should form and the hour of starting will be made when full arrangements have been completed.

Hostages at Gallipoli Suffered Severely, Says Morgenthau

By HENRY MORGENTHAU.
Former U. S. Ambassador to Turkey.

Published by special arrangement with the McClure Newspaper Syndicate. Copyright, 1918, by Doubleday, Page & Co. All rights reserved. Copyright in Great Britain, Canada and Australasia. All rights reserved for France, Belgium, Holland, Italy, Spain, Russia and the Scandinavian countries.

How Turks Treated Prisoners.

The hostages had an uncomfortable time at Gallipoli; they were put into two wooden houses with no beds and no food except that which they had brought themselves. The days and nights were made wretched by the abundant vermin that infested Constantinople in Turkey. Had Mr. Philip not gone with them, they would have suffered seriously. After the unfortunates had been there for a few days I began work with Enver again to get them back.

Sir Edward Grey, then British Secretary for Foreign Affairs, had requested our State Department to send me a message with the request that I present it to Enver and his fellow ministers; its purport was that the British government would hold them personally responsible for any injury to the hostages. I presented this message to Enver on May 8th.

I had seen Enver in many moods, but the unbridled rage which Sir Edward's statement aroused was something entirely new. As I read the telegram his face became livid, and he absolutely lost control of himself. The European polish which Enver had acquired vanished and dropped like a mask; I now saw him for what he really was—a savage, blood-thirsty Turk.

"They will not come back!" he shouted. "I shall let them stay there until they rot!"

"I would like to see those English teach me!" he continued. "I saw that the method which I had always used with Enver, that of persuasion, was of little possible use in handling him. I tried to soothe the Minister now, and, after a while he quieted down.

"But don't ever threaten me again!" he said.

After spending a week at Gallipoli the party returned. The Turks had ordered their military officials to evacuate from Gallipoli and the English fleet, therefore, ceased to bombard it. All came back in good condition and were welcomed home with great enthusiasm.

CHAPTER XX.
More Adventures of Foreign Resident.

The Gallipoli deportation gives some idea of my difficulties. It was tempting to fulfil my duty as the representative of allied interests in the Ottoman Empire. Yet, despite these occasional outbursts of hatred, in the main the Turkish officials I met always behaved very well. They had promised me at the beginning that they would treat their alien enemies decently, and would permit them either to remain in Turkey, and follow their accustomed occupations, or to leave the empire.

They apparently believed that the world would judge them, after the great war was over, by the way they treated their own subject peoples but in way I met the subjects of between the enemy powers. The result was that a Frenchman, an Englishman, or an Italian enjoyed far greater security in Turkey than an Armenian, a Greek, or a Jew. Yet against this opposition to be decent a persistent malevolent force was constantly manifesting itself.

In a letter to the State Department, I described the influence that was working against foreigners in Turkey. Ambassador Morgenthau," I wrote on May 14, 1915, "keeps pressing on the Turks the advisability both of repressive measures and of detaining as hostages the subjects of the belligerent powers. I have had to encounter the persistent opposition of my German colleague in endeavoring to obtain permission for the departure of the subjects of the nationalities under our protection."

Now and then the Turkish officials would retaliate upon one of their enemy aliens, usually in reprisal for some injury, or fancied injury, inflicted on their own subjects in enemy countries.

SIR EDWIN PEARS ARRESTED.

One afternoon I was sitting with Talaat, discussing routine matters, when his telephone rang.

"Your voice," said the Minister, handing me the receiver.

It was one of my secretaries. He told me that Bedri had arrested Sir Edwin Pears, had thrown him into prison, and had seized all his papers. Sir Edwin was one of the best-known British residents of Constantinople. For forty years he had practiced law in the Ottoman capital; he had also written much for the press during that period, and had published several books which had given him fame as an authority on Oriental history and politics. He was about eighty years old and of venerable and distinguished appearance. When the war started I had exerted a special influence from Talaat and Bedri that, in no event, should Sir Edwin Pears and Prof. Van Millingen of Robert College be disturbed. This telephone message which I now received—curiously enough, in Talaat's presence—seemed to indicate that this promise had been broken.

I now turned to Talaat and spoke in a manner that made no attempt to conceal my displeasure.

"Is this all your promises are worth?" I asked. "Can't you find anything better to do than to molest such a respectable old man as Sir Edwin Pears? What has he ever done to you?"

"Come, come, don't get excited," rejoined Talaat. "He's only been in prison for a few hours, and I will see that he is released."

He tried to get Bedri on the wire, but failed. By this time I knew Bedri well enough to understand his methods of operation. When Bedri really wished to be reached on the telephone, he was the most accessible man in the world; when his presence at the other end of the wire might prove embarrassing, the most painstaking search could not reveal his whereabouts. As Bedri had given me his solemn promise that Sir Edwin should not be disturbed, this was an occasion when the prefect of police preferred to keep himself inaccessible.

"I shall stay in this room until you get Bedri," I now told Talaat. The big Turk took the situation good-humoredly. He waited a considerable period, but Bedri succeeded in avoiding an encounter. Finally I called up one of my secretaries and told him to go out and hunt for the fleeing prefect.

"Tell Bedri," I said, "that I have Talaat under arrest in his own office and that I shall not let him leave it until he has been able to interview Bedri to release Sir Edwin Pears."

Talaat was greatly enjoying the comedy of the situation; he knew Bedri's ways even better than I did and he was much interested in seeing whether I should succeed in finding him. But in a few moments the telephone rang. It was Bedri. I told Talaat to tell him that I was going to the prison in my own automobile to get Sir Edwin Pears.

"Please don't let him do that," replied Bedri. "Such an occurrence would make me personally ridiculous and destroy my influence."

VENERABLE PRISONER FREED.

"Very well," I replied, "I shall wait until 6 p.m. If Sir Edwin is not restored to his family by that time, I shall go to the police headquarters and get him."

As I returned to the embassy I stopped at the Pears' residence and attempted to soothe Lady Pears and her daughter.

"If your father is not here at 6:15," I told Miss Pears, "please let me know immediately."

Promptly at that time my telephone rang. It was Miss Pears, who informed me that Sir Edwin had just reached home.

(To Be Continued Monday in the Boston American.)

WORKERS REFUSE TO MARCH WITH NEALEY

Lynn members of the United Shoe Workers of America, numbering nearly 15,000, several thousand of whom are women, announced today that they would refuse to march in the proposed Victory parade in any division headed by William A. Nealey, president of the Massachusetts Branch, American Federation of Labor.

Action was taken through the shoe workers' delegates to the joint council, United Shoe Workers of America. The reason assigned is that Nealey, during the recent election campaign, issued signed circulars urging the election of John W. Weeks for Senator, and a protective tariff.

Nealey's action at the time was condemned in all parts of the State. Yesterday he was appointed by Mayor Walter H. Creamer to act as marshal in the parade scheduled to take place as soon as the armistice is signed.

The shoe workers will take part in the parade, but in a division headed by Stephen M. Walsh, general secretary-treasurer of the United Shoe Workers of America.

CRIPPLED HERO OF SEA IN VAIN SEEKS WORK

Victim of U-Boat Attack on Lifeboat Falls From Grace and Police Get Him

In Charles Street Jail today, Carl Russell, a negro, thirty-nine years old, exhibited a thumb and forefinger, which was all that remained of his right hand; a crippled left foot and a badly damaged left knee.

In a fit of despondency over his failure to land a job, Carl had indulged too freely. He was said to be found in the gutter by an officer and taken to jail, but his disfigured limbs had nothing to do with his fall from grace. They relate to a piece of Swedishness, four years back, of a German submarine which, according to Carl, swept a rapid-fire gun over a lifeboat containing the survivors of the British ship Dugedin, torpedoed and sunk in the Mediterranean Sea.

WILLING TO TAKE A CHANCE.

Carl has spent eighteen years at sea. When the war broke out he shipped on one of the vessels of the English Navigation Company at Newport News, Va. He says he risks of war, understanding was explained to him, but he agreed to take a chance.

A few months later he shipped on board the British steamship Dunedin with a cargo for a Mediterranean port and when submarine fire from the vessel was torpedoed by a German U-boat. When the crew took to the boats the German commander fired on them, he says, and he was struck by three bullets. His right hand was practically torn off and his left foot and knee were smashed.

Suffering as he was from these wounds, it was twenty-eight hours before he and his companions were rescued and hurried to Malta. There an Italian surgeon patched him up as best he could.

CAN RUN A MOTOR.

In spite of this harrowing experience, Russell says he remained in the service until last January, when he quit. Since then he has been trucking, his hand being fully healed. Automobile truck from New York to Boston, where he came to look for steady work.

Carl says he has no claim on the British government for his injuries, but that as a result of them he finds it hard to obtain work. He can drive a motor truck, however, is what he will do when he obtains his liberty.

NATION-WIDE BAN ON GERMAN-MADE GOODS

New York, Nov. 9.—A national boycott committee was formed today by a meeting of 100 representatives of various patriotic societies, presided over by Mrs. Ida Tarbell. It was decided to boycott all German-made goods. Richard M. Hurd was named chairman. Franklin Hobbs, president of the Corn Exchange Bank of Chicago, made the startling statement that German goods other than toys are finding their way into the United States.

NEW YORK COAL TO GO UP 95 CENTS A TON

New York, Nov. 9.—Retail coal dealers are permitted to raise the price of anthracite, above "buckwheat" ninety-five cents a ton, according to an announcement by the New York State Fuel Administrator Cook. The increase will allow 16,000 people contributed, rather more than 30 per cent. of the population.

Yours truly,
JOSEPH WIGGIN, Chairman.

TURKEY TO BE A REAL LUXURY THANKSGIVING

Only the Prosperous May Hope to Observe Old New England Custom

If you have a small family, the chances are that you will have no turkey for Thanksgiving. If you have a large family it's nearly a certainty that you will go turkeyless for the price of turkey, for an old-fashioned New England family of twelve or fourteen, will put it beyond the means of any but the people of wealth, among whom the old-fashioned family is quite scarce.

Interpreted, this is what the new ruling of the national food administration means—that no hen turkeys less than eight pounds and no tom turkeys less than twelve pounds are to be purchased by poultry dealers before December 7.

Added to that is the fact that the supply is very short and that the government has contracted for large supplies for the soldiers in camp, so the possibilities of turkey for Thanksgiving wax fewer and fewer. There are other regulations made by the Food Administration, according to a prominent market man, whose turkey purchases for Thanksgiving and Christmas average four or five carloads.

The Food Administration has asked that no turkeys be bought after November 15 by wholesalers, in order to prevent an accumulation of birds in cold storage. Also all caterers, hotel and restaurant proprietors are asked to make a specialty of the local products for Thanksgiving dinner.

"It may be fresh pork or it may be chicken, or, in certain localities, it may be turkeys," elucidates the market man. "The idea is to keep the sale of turkeys down."

Turkeys today are costing the wholesaler $0 to $2 cents, by the box. They are retailing at around 60 cents or more, for extra fine specimens of birds. These turkeys are the fresh killed Western varieties.

Vermont growers are being offered 70 cents a pound at their local stations. This is considered an indication that Vermont turkeys will bring 70 to 75 cents a pound in the market by Christmas.

The ruling of the food administration is interpreted by the big dealers as an assurance of bigger and better quality of birds for Thanksgiving, and an elimination of that waste that is almost certain to result when scrawny birds, with pin, scrawny birds flood the market.

It is also looked upon by the big poultry dealers as an assurance of protection to the man who buys his turkeys by the four or five carload lots, for the holidays. By the new ruling that no turkeys can be purchased by the wholesaler after November 15, the small dealer will be prevented from rushing into the market a day or two days before Christmas and buying his three or four boxes of turkeys after the price has dropped three or four cents a pound.

MALDEN'S MILLION HEREBY CREDITED

The following letter explains itself:

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

We are in trouble again in Malden about our Liberty Loan total, just as we were on the Third Loan.

Malden's quota on the Fourth Loan was $2,601,000. The figures given in the Boston papers yesterday of our subscriptions were $2,541,250. The result is one just one million dollars out of the way and should be $3,045,250. To this result almost 16,000 people contributed, rather more than 30 per cent. of the population.

Yours truly,
JOSEPH WIGGIN, Chairman.

Film More Thousands for the "Miles of Smiles"

Charlestown and Somerville relatives of soldiers marched before the camera today, for the "miles of movies" to be sent to cheer the boys abroad. The pictures were taken by the AMERICAN photographer at the Sullivan square playground, where thousands of fathers, mothers, war brides and babies, sisters and sweethearts passed before the films.

South Boston residents of Wards 9 and 10, who have soldiers overseas, are invited to be filmed tomorrow at Marine Park, City Point, when the sixth instalment of movies of the "home folks" will be taken at 2 p. m.

Close-ups of brides and war babies will be taken, and relatives are asked to wear their best, so as to cheer the boys, and to bring personal greetings on placards.

On Wednesday, November 13, residents of the South End, Dorchester and Roxbury included in Wards 11, 12 and 13 will be photographed at the William Eustis playground, Massachusetts avenue and Proctor street; Arlington and Cambridge relatives will be taken at Rindge Field, North Cambridge, Saturday afternoon, November 16; Dorchester Centre, Ashmont, Neponset and Mattapan relatives, at Franklin Field, corner of Blue Hill and Talbot avenues, Sunday, November 17; Brighton, Allston and Brookline relatives, on Wednesday, November 20, the location to be announced later.

Other appointments, at the rate of three a week, to include all Boston and Greater Boston, will be made in due season.

Watch the AMERICAN for announcements of the dates and places.

Gather Nuts Today for Gas Masks; Get Busy!

Today is "Gas Mask Day!"

Which means that our soldiers in France need all the nut shells and peach stones, and apricot and prune and plum and date and olive and cherry pits that used to be wasted to be made into carbon for gas masks to save their lives. The Red Cross has asked every child, and every grown-up for that matter, to make special effort "Gas Mask Day." And the Red Cross says that about 70 per cent of the contributions urged in this way from Washington urged all districts to keep on collecting; there is no let-up yet. In the woods walnuts, beechnuts and hickory nuts may still be found. And the children sent with the shells, may also be used.

So the Governor set this Saturday aside. Today is "Gas Mask Day!" Today is Nut Day! Let every true American do his part.

Be Better Looking—Take Olive Tablets

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should take Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 17 years of study with his patients.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color.

To have a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days you must get rid of constipation.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after effects.

They start the bile and overcome constipation. That's why millions of boxes are sold annually at 10c and 25c per box. Take one or two at night and note the pleasing results.

AYER TROOPS IN CELEBRATION AT HAVERHILL

By THOMAS F. PHELAN.

Camp Devens, Ayer, Nov. 9.—Accompanied by the 301th Infantry band, two battalions of men from the depot brigade left this cantonment today to take part in the all-day celebration in Haverhill arranged by Mayor Leslie K. Morse and a committee of business men in that city. The band gave a concert of patriotic music in Groveland.

A feature of the day is a football game between a team representing the soldiers and a crack Haverhill school organization eleven. The soldiers were met in the railroad station by crowds of people, who extended them a royal welcome as they paraded through the principal streets.

A weighty impetus was given to the United War Work campaign in Lowell today when 1,000 men of the depot brigade from this cantonment took part in the big parade there. The depot brigade band led the procession, in which appeared hundreds of women whose relatives are in the service.

The men left here for Lowell in large auto trucks. The soldiers later took part in a mimic battle on the Lowell South Common. The officers and other invited guests will be tendered a banquet this evening at the Yorick Club. Social organization in that city.

Cook Frank Russell of I Company, 42d Infantry, was found guilty of violating the ninety-third article of war. It is alleged that on or about September 11 he did "feloniously take, steal and carry away one Liberty Loan button, value $50, and cash to the amount of $85, the property of Cook Richard E. Cutts, Company I, 42d Infantry."

He was sentenced to be dishonorably discharged from the service, to forfeit all pay and allowances due or to become due, and to be confined at hard labor at such place as the reviewing authority may direct for a period of two years. The sentence, approved by Major-General McCain, and Russell will serve his jail sentence at Atlanta.

Private John Kubits of F Company, 301st Infantry, and Private Stanley Irving Drew of the Twenty-ninth Company, Depot Brigade, died of pneumonia at the base hospital. Kubits lived in Indianapolis, Ind., and Drew hailed from Wilmington, Me.

Camp Beau Brummels Must Have Hair Cut Shorter

Camp Devens, Ayer, Nov. 9.—An order has been issued ordering all men in the Plymouth Division to get their hair cut. They are to have only an inch of hair on their head.

Each man will be inspected at roll call today to see if the order has been obeyed. Heavy penalty is provided for all who neglect to comply with the order.

Some of the Beau Brummels, those who take great delight in parting their hair, shed tears when they heard that they must get rid of their locks.

MRS. HOUSEWIFE ADD $1 MORE TO COAL PRICE

Mrs. Housewife will add another increase of price to her weekly budget when coal advances at least a dollar a ton, as it it bound to do under the ruling of the Fuel Administration, to permit retail dealers to increase the price.

The dollar increase is a conservative estimate made by the Metropolitan Coal Company, which is certain that the increase will be at least that amount and possibly more.

That means that most sizes of anthracite, instead of being $11 a ton, will be $12, that pea coal, which has been $10, will be $11 and that prices may vary a little in different communities. An additional charge of forty cents a ton is made for basketing.

"Every operating cost will be taken into account before the price is fixed," said an official of this company. "The price is based first on the increase of pay awarded to workers in the mines, but everything else will also be taken into consideration.

"The last increase in price in Boston was made on July 20. Since that time everything—labor and everything else—has gone up. It costs more to do business now that it did at that time. We are asked by the fuel administration to make a profit of operative costs. After this is done we are told what we are allowed to charge. The fuel administration fixes the price.

"The advance will certainly be a dollar, but it may be more than that. The householder can count on that much, at least."

The THEATRE by F. J. McISAAC

TYPICAL WOODS FARCE AT PARK SQ.

The best place in the world to catch a theatrical manager is on a train between New York and Chicago. Trail him on board and insinuate yourself into the drawing-room that a real manager always engages, before he has time to lock the door.

Shut up on a train for twenty-four hours, a manager has nothing to do but read plays. Now that prohibition is being enforced on government railways, there is nothing to distract his mind. He has to read plays. Jules Echert Goodman, and George V. Hobart are always prowling about the Twentieth Century Limited looking for managers, but a non union playwright named Wilson Collison backed A. H. Woods into a corner and unloaded "Up in Mabel's Room" upon him.

The title of this delicacy was originally "Go Easy, Mabel," but somebody insinuated that it was rather suggestive, so Mr. Woods, who abhors anything verging upon the improper, changed the name to "Up in Mabel's Room," a caption upon which he challenges the world to cast aspersions.

Mr. Collisen, an unknown playwright, had been hawking his manuscript up and down Broadway for months without getting a manager to pay any attention to him. One day, when standing upon the corner of Forty-Second street talking to a friend, a sporty looking person in a great hurry went by.

"There goes Al Woods, the livest wire in the show business," said the friend.

Collison dropped friend like a hot cake and pursued the manager. Woods went to the Grand Central station and bought a ticket for Chicago. Collison had only $59 left, but he cashed it all in for a ticket and followed his victim aboard the train.

Woods disappeared into a compartment and Collison followed him in. The manager had lit a cigar and was opening a traveling bag which contained six plays and a clean collar, when the young man burst in.

"Don't throw me out," he said. And then he told the story of his life. Woods capitulated and the author read the play to him. When he was through, the manager stacked him up his dinner and after getting an agreement to stand for alterations in Mabel's entourage, gave him a check for advance royalties.

Resting on His Laurels?

When is David Belasco going back to work?

This man has revolutionized the business of producing plays in the past twenty years. Chiefly through his influence the staging of a drama in America is infinitely more effective than anywhere else in the world.

He has written several great plays, collaborated in others and deserves authorship credit where he doesn't claim it in several cases where his keen sense of stage arrangement has made all the difference between failure and success.

The man who is responsible for "The Girl of the Golden West," "Madame Butterfly" and "The Darling of the Gods" has been content for several seasons past to tickle the popular fancy and let it go at that. Without reflecting in the least upon "The Boomerang," "Tiger Rose" and other recent Belasco successes, they are trivial affairs compared to what Belasco has accomplished in the past.

And even in a sugary comedy like "The Boomerang," and a picturesque popular melodrama like "Tiger Rose," the great artist who is Belasco shows his skillful hand.

In the case of "Tiger Rose" you will notice that a solid house is built upon the stage. The doors are of heavy timber, the settings massive, the details of a cabin interior marvelously complete. Painted canvas plays a small part in the scenery of a Belasco play, and the sense of reality you get is partly due to the fact that you are looking at real things and not imitations.

In casting a melodrama the ordinary manager would hire a leading woman who struck him as likely to fit the part, stick the manuscript in her hand and tell her that rehearsals would begin immediately.

Not so Belasco. Miss Ulric was under contract to him. He needed a play which would suit her piquancy, her exoticness and so scintillant she of late, when Willard Mack suggested a French Canadian girl of the great Northwest be decided that such a role would give her a great opportunity. But in order that she should do it properly he sent her into the Canadian Northwest, where she should see the people among whom the play was cast and make its mission in her interpretation of the role. That very wonderful little figure of flower whom Miss Ulric shows us in "Tiger Rose" is the result of several months' hard study in Northwest Canada.

A Fat Vampire.

Don't shudder, Sue MacManamy, of "Business Before Pleasure," you're just a bit plump. But in "Seventeen" there is a fat vampire. She gets Willie Baxter when he comes late to the party and finds all the other girls with their dance cards full. Alice Horton is her name and she used to be a school teacher before Stuart Walker fitted her into a stage role.

"Pooh, I don't mind being big," said Miss Horton, "as long as there is a place for big women on the stage, and there certainly is, for any number of us are getting by. Fat people have made more impression in the world than thin ones. Balzac, for example, and Irving Cobb. Think of all the fat kings like Henry the Eighth. How about Tetrazini, and Trixie Friganza, and Eva Davenport, and even Ellen Key? I should worry about being fat."

No Relation to Prince Otto

Frank Otto, who is an excellent foil for Frank Craven in "Going Up," toured last season as the bartender-preacher of "Hit the Trail Holiday," one of the most successful pieces yet put out by the Cohan and Harris office, and which was suggested by the career of Billy Sunday.

By the way, George Cohan's latest play, the title of which is "The Voice of McConnell," is said to be based upon the career of John McCormack. His tenor and Chauncey Olcott will take the leading role.

But to get back to Otto, he and his wife, Lola Norrill, have been vaudeville favorites for several seasons and left the twice-a-day because of the call of "art," and accompanying pecuniary remuneration. Otto is a breezy individual with a lot of personality. He is a Boston boy and knows all the local grips and passwords.

Loves the Old Sinner.

Otis Skinner was talking about Colonel Bridau while still wearing the costume of the hero of "The Honor of the Family," for the matinee was just over.

"I love the old rogue," he declared. "No character among the many I have played has a firmer artic upon my affections. Ang my conception of him has changed, also. I'll waiger that you would notice it if you saw him the first day I played him and now.

"I used to think he was an unwholesome creature, a braggart, a flamboyant blusterer whose chief aim was money. But as I worked into the role I realized that underneath his eccentricities he was very human and his boisterousness and peculiarities didn't prevent his being lovable. Now, ten years later, I find him delightful. Perhaps it is because of our increased liking for everything French. Here we have one of Napoleon's veterans, and about us we have the veterans of anothe war, a war for France. Being in a warlike period we can reach back through the century and grasp the hand of Philippe Bridau, soldier of France, adventurer and gentleman.

Just the Same as Jail.

Mark Kent, of the new stock company at the Castle Square, is a humorist as well as a comedian. That doubtless is the reason for the comic value that he gives to the characters he acts. Asked recently for a biological sketch of himself, he made out a type-written sheet. In this fashion: "Name: Mark Kent. Color: White. Birth: American. Term of service: In various prisons. Winter seasons: Boston, Philadelphia, Toronto, Winnipeg, Denver, Washington, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Toledo, Springfield. Summer terms: Rochester; seven seasons in Portland, Me.; Salem; Providence; Buffalo."

The professional career thus modestly and humorously outlined, might have considerable amplification. For instance, Mr. Kent might have said that he is a Bostonian, that he was a member of the stock company at the Castle Square some years ago, and that he was one of the very first persons to be engaged by the management when the present stock company was being got together.

Jewett Going to Move.

Henry Jewett and his Players are going traveling.

After two solid years at the Copley they will leave that establishment for a brief season at the Providence Opera House, and in six weeks will present there "You Never Can Tell," "The Importance of Being Earnest," "Charley's Aunt," "Major Barbara," "She Stoops to Conquer" and "Inside the Lines."

During their absence the house will remain under the same management and will present attractions which will be announced later. It is rumored that Oliver Morosco is trying to secure the house as a tryout theatre for his Broadway productions.

Bust Out Acting

When David Warfield applied for his job he assured the stage manager that he was a comedian.

"Oh, a funny man," said the manager.

"Yes, sir."

"You are," doubted the magnate frowning at the young actor forcibly. "Then make me laugh."

Warfield retired hastily.

Probably this story suggested to Montague Glass that Potash and Perlmutter when they were hiring picture actors should demand samples of dramatic art.

"Go ahead," said Perlmutter to the dramatic applicant. "Do something. Bust out acting."

But, unlike Warfield, these actors all perform, and all of them attempt to give a scene from Warfield's own "Music Master."

"If you don't vant her I vant her. If you won't take her I'll take her."

What the Wild Women Say.

There have been many inquiries as to the exact wording of the recitation of the wild women in the slave market scene in "Chu Chin Chow" at the Shubert Theatre. Miss Marjorie Wood, who plays the part of Zahrat, the slave girl, recites the following lines:

Oh yo, who in walled cities dwell,
What do ye know of life?
Oh ye, whose thought is buy and sell,
What taste have ye of strife?
Oh ye, who breathe but reek and dust,
Who hoard your wealth for moth and rust,
Whose veins are clogged by lazy lust—
What can ye know of passion's gust?

But we, who in the desert live—
Yea, live and live and live—
We, who sell not love, but give—
Yea, give and give and give;
By desert sire and mother bred
Our love is not on riches fed.
With teeth and lips we kisses shed,
We whose blood is hot and red,
See their bodies whirling, throbbing,
See their bosoms heaving, sobbing;
See their mad eyes gleaming;
See their love blood streaming;
Hear their senses screaming!
Ah, they live, they love, they give.

—Words by Oscar Asche, author of "Chu Chin Chow."

What's This?

William Norris, who plays a man at the age of twenty, to r. sixty-five and ninety in "Maytime," says that the girls nowadays in the last act are not nearly so pretty as they used to be in the first act back in 1835. His comment is probably as accurate as most of those reports of the "good old times" are wont to be.

PARK SQUARE THEATRE

"Up in Mabel's Room" will be up for criticism at the Park Square Theatre Monday night. "Up in Mabel's Room" was written by Otto Harbach and Wilson Collisen, and according to the advance billing is a "frivolous farce of feminine foibles."

Whether "Up in Mabel's Room" will live up to the expectations claimed for it in the advance notices is a matter of small moment. The foremost fact about the entertainment is that its producer, A. H. Woods, must be given credit for having stirred the imagination of staid old New England as it probably never has been stirred. In the cast are Hazel Dawn, Walter Jones, John Cumberland, Dudley Hawley, Enid Markey, Evelyn Gosnell and others, who may be relied on as funmakers.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE

For the second week of the season at the Castle Square "The Misleading Lady" will be the play. This highly delightful and popular farce will then receive its first Boston presentation by a stock company.

The scenes of "The Misleading Lady" are in the wilds of the Adirondacks, and an abduction of a comic nature is its principal motive. To those picturesque regions go the hero and the heroine, and there they encounter a somewhat crack-brained man who believes that he is the reincarnation of the Emperor Napoleon. This is of course a plot that throws probability to the winds, but that is exactly what is sought by the dramatists, and the play is thereby made all the more diverting.

The Castle Square Stock Company is now firmly established in the favor of Boston playgoers. It is exceptionally well balanced, it contains several old favorites and a number of new players that bid fair to become no less popular. Its full strength will be in the cast of "The Misleading Lady."

COPLEY THEATRE

"You Never Can Tell," Bernard Shaw's highly popular comedy, will be the play at the Copley Theatre next week. This is one of the brilliant Irishman's best known and most successful comedies.

The plot of "You Never Can Tell" centres about the personality of a delightful butler, and it is filled with the characteristic Shavian humor that has been no small factor in the making of Shaw's reputation.

In short, Shaw was never in a livelier mood than when he wrote "You Never Can Tell," and that accounts largely for its popularity. He does not preach in it, he does not deal with problems as in some of his other plays. He is simply writing a play for purposes of entertainment. It will be staged at the Copley Theatre under the personal direction of Henry Jewett, and the cast will include Phyllis Relph, Jessamine Newcombe, Viola Roach, H. Conway Wingfield, Fred W. Permain, E. E. Clive, Leonard Crake, Noel Leslie, Montague Weston, and the entire personnel of Mr. Jewett's company.

ORPHEUM THEATRE

Two all-star bills of vaudeville are announced for the week at Loew's Orpheum theatre. For the first half one of the prominent acts is that of Southe & Tobin, Bostonians, who have won considerable favor locally as singers and bright comedians. Other acts on the bill will be H. Guy Woodward and Company in a one-act play, "The Crisis," described as an episode of everyday life; Weber & Elliott in songs and comedy; the Youngs, in original acrobatic feats. The screen bills vie with the vaudeville for distinction, and what should be the most powerful magnet is the showing of Charlie Chaplin in "Shoulder Arms." His experiences which lead him to induction into service are no less ludicrous than those which follow. The photoplay for the first half will be "The Panther Woman," picturing the emotional actress, Olga Petrova.

GAYETY THEATRE

Now that burlesque is gradually getting away from the odium which in the past has attached to it name and is making it appeal to an ever widening circle of patrons, it is possible to introduce in it novelties of a broader scope. One of the first producers to take advantage of this condition was Lew Kelly whose company comes to the Gayety Theatre next Monday matinee for the usual engagement of one week with daily matinees. In this offering he has managed to place numerous novelties of entertainment and construction and at the same time keep his entertainment of the sort known as "typically burlesque." In other words, without changing the main structure of his show, he has provided a diversified entertainment that has a claim upon the interest of every class of theatregoer.

WALDRON'S CASINO

There is little doubt of burlesque patrons being highly enthusiastic over the performances of "Rose Sydell's London Belles in Whoop-De-Doo," to be seen the coming week at Waldron's Casino. Everything in the piece is new, from chorus girls to music and scenery. Such leading players as George F. Hayes and Kate Pullman insure a successful production, but the cast includes also such clever burlesque artists as Al Ferris, Louise Hartman, Steve Paul, J. Jones Wilson, Edward Smith, Gertrude O'Connor and Martha Richards.

KEITH'S THEATRE

Charles Leverberg's "Hands Across the Sea," an international review, will be presented as the headliner at Keith's Theatre next week. It will be the first local presentation of the big new dancing spectacle which caused so much talk in the New York vaudeville houses. In this great production is a company of fifteen, among those in the company are Estelle and Adelaide Leverberg, Simon Neary. There are four beautiful realistic scenes, showing the Bay of Naples, Donnybrook Fair, Trafalgar Square, London and America.

As well as this great act, which itself is a whole show, there is also "Crosby's Corners," featuring Felix Rush. It is a rural comedy sketch that is worth while. The Clarke sisters are up-to-the-minute dancers. Law and Gena Archer are a clever pair of boys, the Legrohs are an acrobatic team, Robert Swann is a versatile entertainer, and Wellington Cross, the musical comedy star, is an extraordinary addition because of the above billing. The Pathe weekly and the latest edition of war pictures will also be on the program.

SUNDAY CONCERT

For tomorrow's concert in Symphony Hall (Sunday afternoon at 3:30) Boston concert-goers will have opportunity to hear Emilio de Gogorza, one of the most admirable singers of the concert stage. He will share tomorrow's program with Miss Hostia Reinard, the young Chilean pianist, of Paris training, who has previously been heard in Boston to advantage.

BARRYMORE COMING

At the Hollis Street Theatre, on Monday evening, November 18th, Ethel Barrymore will enter upon an engagement of two weeks, the event marking the return of this most popular of our actresses to Boston after an absence of two years. She will be seen in the comedy in which she appeared for the larger part of last season at the Empire Theatre in New York, R. C. Carton's "The Off Chance." Mr. Carton will be agreeably recalled as the author of "Lord and Lady Algy," "Wheels Within Wheels," "Liberty Hall" and "Lady Huntworth's Experiment." He is said to have supplied Miss Barrymore with one of the best roles she has had in recent seasons and one of the kind in which the enormous Barrymore following loves best to see her.

McISAAC says that

"TIGER ROSE," Belasco's production of Willard Mack's melodrama at the Tremont, offers a very talented and fascinating little woman, Leonora Ulric, in a wonderful role, while the action is rapid and the interest in the piece breathless.

"MAYTIME," the most artistic production yet made by the Shuberts, offers ineffable sweetness, novel situations and fine acting and singing. It is at the Majestic, and is worth a visit.

OTIS SKINNER, the leading American actor, has revived, at the Hollis Street Theatre, one of his greatest roles with "The Honor of the Family." It is a play for people who appreciate good acting and sustained interest.

"BUSINESS BEFORE PLEASURE," at the Wilbur, brings back Potash and Perlmutter, who are now in the motion picture business. While not a wonderfully constructed comedy, it contains more laughs to the minute than a film by Charlie Chaplin and Doug Fairbanks rolled into one. And it is not a motion picture, either.

"SEVENTEEN," Stuart Walker's dramatization of Booth Tarkington's stories of a seventeen-year-old boy, is a worthy staging of most entertaining character sketches. Gregory Kelly, Ruth Gordon and other players make Willie Baxter and his friends seem very much alive.

"CHU CHIN CHOW," perhaps the most magnificently produced comic opera ever put on the stage, has only three weeks more to run. The atmosphere of the Arabian Nights, marvellous color and vivid acting make this something memorable.

"GOING UP," Conan and Harris' big musical comedy, has caught on with a vengeance. It is a very good show of the popular type, full of very light but catchy music and pretty girls.

"CRASHING THROUGH TO BERLIN" is a very able edition of dramatic bits of war film from the beginning of the war to the present time.

REAL THING NOT REAL ENOUGH

Among the curious jobs in a motion picture studio is that of "location finder." He is the person who finds the spot which most resembles what is called for in the scenario and which is least expensive and least far away from the main studio.

During the taking of the "Gypsy Trail," the new photoplay in which Bryant Washburn will be seen at the Beacon and Modern Theatres next week, a gypsy camp was required. The location finder discovered a romantic spot easily enough, but for peopling it with real gypsies he was in a quandary. After telegraphing around, the location man finally found a band of real Gypsies and had them brought with their camping outfit to the required spot. When the director saw them he was much disgusted because they lacked picturesque qualities and were just scrubby and squalid looking.

"They're the real thing," said the location man.

"But you couldn't make the public believe it," replied the director. Accordingly he augmented the real Gypsies with a number of actors who were sufficiently picturesque enough to please the camera. But how the real ones did cuy the imitations.

Fell Into the Movies.

Norma Talmage says she didn't start in motion pictures, she was jostled in.

"I was just a school girl in New York city and I had become imbued with the idea I could act for the screen. Accordingly, I started one Saturday morning for a studio in New Jersey and boldly entered. There were a number of workmen and in dodging them, I found myself in the midst of a crowd of people who were about to pose for a scene. I found myself pushed on as an extra and from that accidental beginning I have never been idle. Miss Talmage will be seen in her latest photoplay "The Forbidden City" at the Orpheum Theatre the last half of next week.

What a Face for a Cartoonist.

Cartoon artistry has revealed in a wealth of opportunity during the four years of the war. Because of feeling against the Germans the greatest license was allowable, and the countenance of the Kaiser and the Crown Prince came in for terrible handling. But the one face which could be utilized as the symbol of brutality and ruthlessness was that of Hindenburg.

This great brute is actually seen in his own person in "Crashing Thru to Berlin." As the bit of film was made before the United States entered the war Hindenburg treated the camera with what he regarded as a smile.

BOSTON THEATRE

A co-feature movie bill has been arranged for the Boston Theatre week of November 11. Charlie Chaplin will appear in his latest million-dollar production, "Shoulder Arms."

The vaudeville bill is an extraordinary one, with Charles Edward Trio, Duval and Symonds in a new singing and talking act, the Sharrocks in a new sketch, "Behind the Grandstand,"

FILMS AT THE LEADING HOUSES

PARK THEATRE

Manager Thomas D. Soriero has arranged for the showing of another remarkable William Fox production, featuring William Farnum, "The Rainbow Trail." The action centres in and about the wilds of the Arizona desert. The scenic settings are said to be of unsurpassed beauty, and include the famous cliff dwellings, the painted deserts, and the famed Arizona Grand Canyon. The story is full of dramatic situations and shows Farnum as the famous Lasher and also in the character of Shefford, two of the leading figures in this wonderful story.

Bluebird Film presents the other feature on the program, "The Lure of Luxury," featuring dainty Ruth Clifford in a six-act story which tells of the allurements held out by a young girl's wealthy guardian in the city if she would leave her humble country surroundings and give up her old friends.

MODERN THEATRE

A trio of popular screen stars headed by the inimitable Charlie Chaplin will characterize the program for the coming week at the Modern Theatre. The popular comedian is announced to appear in the second of his "million dollar series of comedies" entitled "Shoulder Arms," a comedy that all advance notices indicate is replete with good, genuine, wholesome laughter and is wholly devoid of any slap-stick comedy. The companion photoplays will offer Marion Davies, acclaimed as one of the most beautiful actresses of the cinema, in her latest production, entitled "The Burden of Proof." The other production will be Bryant Washington in a remarkable photo-adaptation of "The Gypsy Trail," a photoplay that is full of human appeal.

BEACON THEATRE

Throughout the week at the Beacon Theatre there will be presented an extensive bill of first-run photoplays, enlisting three of the leading stars of the studio, Charlie Chaplin will be shown in his new film farce, "Shoulder Arms," in which he is pictured as a patriotic citizen who leaves to the call to arms and goes with his brother soldiers to attack the dark forces of neight. His intent is laudable, but his means of accomplishment are so unusual to the point of ludicrousness that the humor for which the comedian is famous has the largest of parts to play in the incidents pictured.

GLOBE THEATRE

The all-week film bill to be shown at Loew's Globe Theatre will include the first showings of Olga Petrova in "The Lesser Woman," a vivid story of a woman whose extremes of temperament are of the feline species, and who moves through a series of incidents which form a powerful drama and fit the artiste with an emotional role which tests her full powers. Another first showing will be of Charlie Chaplin in his latest film farce, "Shoulder Arms," picturing the comedian in experiences martial and otherwise, all to the accompaniment of first quality clowning which is to the full in spirit of laughter. The other photoplay will be "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots."

STRAND THEATRE

Everything seems completely auspicious for the opening Monday night of Boston's newest theatre and greatest motion picture house—the Strand, at Upham's Corner. The theatre itself is beyond criticism, as indeed it should be, after the expenditure of more than a million dollars upon its construction and embellishment.

The opening bill, for the first three days of this week, which is claimed to be only typical of what is coming, is truly double measure for movie lovers, including two great features. Annette Kellerman, the human mermaid and acknowledged as the most shapely woman in the world, appears in a masterly picture, "Queen of the Sea," which is the most costly and amazing aquatic spectacle ever presented.

FRANKLIN PARK THEATRE

The leading vaudeville at Loew's Franklin Park Theatre the first half of the week will be Carl McCullough, the well known and clever comedian. Other acts will be Lowe and Baker Sisters, singers and dancers; Eckhoff and Gordon, musical comedians; and the Great Johnson, contortionist. On the screen there will be shown news pictures, a comedy, and Charles Ray in "The Law of the North." The bill for the last half will be Archer and Belford, in "The New Janitor"; Mel Klee, blackface comedian; and Sterling Sisters, dainty singers; and on the screen the third episode of "The Hand of Vengeance," and Douglas Fairbanks in "He Comes Up Smiling."

COLUMBIA THEATRE

An extensive bill of photoplays is announced for the first half of the week at Loew's Columbia Theatre. Charlie Chaplin will be shown in his new film farce, "Shoulder Arms." The photoplays to be shown are Lila Lee in "The Cruise of the Make Believe," in which she is seen as a little girl of the tenements meeting with romance in a surprising and charming adventure, and "The Girl of the Golden West," a screening of the well-known play.

CODMAN SQUARE THEATRE

There will be the usual high class entertainment provided for the large number of patrons of the popular Codman Square Theatre, Dorchester, in the bill arranged by Manager Harry E. Jones for the coming week. In addition to a quartet of vaudeville acts there will be shown for the first time in Dorchester the intensely patriotic photoplay, "Mr. Logan, U. S. A.", in which the well-liked Tom Mix is featured.

SYMPHONY CONCERTS

The third pair of Symphony concerts which will be given next Friday afternoon, November 15th, and Saturday evening, November 16th, are exciting unwonted interest and curiosity in the musical public of Boston. At these concerts the Symphony patrons will hear the ochresta for the first time under its new permanent conductor, Henri Rabaud. In Boston, as in Cambridge on Thursday night, Mr. Rabaud opens his program with Ekoica Symphony of Beethoven.

In the second part of the program will be found two numbers. The first of these is the unfamiliar symphonic poem of Saint Saens entitled "The Youth of Hercules," and the second Rimsky Korsakoff's brilliant caprice on Spanish themes. "The Youth of Hercules" was last played in Boston in the Spring of 1905 and so it will come as a novelty to a large part of the audience. Rimsky-Korsakoff's Caprice is better known, as it has been played several times in the last few years.

FALL TRAFFIC BRISK

The good business reported on the Metropolitan Division of the Eastern Steamship Lines, considerably better, in fact, than for the same period last year, is accounted for, so the management think, by the recent reduction of fare between Boston and New York. As already pointed out, this service is much cheaper than by rail. The fact that there are two steamboats, the Belfast and the Camden, devoted to this arm of the service, supplying the public with ample accommodations and that they are provided with "up-to-the-minute" equipment speaks volumes for their popularity. Moreover, they are twin screw express turbine steel steamboats.

An Absorbing War-Time Novel Based on the Adventures of a German Spy in England

SYNOPSIS.

Lady Cranston, whose brother, Major Felstead, has been taken prisoner by the Germans, goes to London to seek news of him. She returns to her home by the sea to hear that an empty Zeppelin has not has fallen on Dutchman's Common. The commandant of the district and Helen Fairclough, Lady Cranston's friend and her brother's fiancee, discuss the unusual occurrence. When they are alone a stranger, disheveled and hungry, enters the room through a window. The women start to have him arrested when he halts them and gives them such a letter from Major Felstead. He secures from them a suit of English clothes and a promise to protect him. Sir Henry recognizes the clothes and later receives a telephone that he is being watched by the enemy.

CHAPTER VII.—Continued

PHILIPPA lifted her head a little. This was the pronouncement toward which she had been leading.

"From today," she declared, "I cease to be your wife."

His fingers paused in the manipulation of the tobacco with which he was filling his pipe. He turned and looked at her.

"You what?"

"I cease to be your wife."

"How do you manage that?" he asked.

"Don't jest!" she begged. "It hurts me so. What I mean is surely plain enough. I will continue to live under your roof if you wish it, or I am perfectly willing to go back to Wood Norton. I will continue to bear your name because I must, but the other ties between us are finished."

"You don't mean this, Philippa," he said gravely.

"But I do mean it," she insisted. "I mean every word I have spoken. So far as I am concerned, Henry, this is your last chance."

There was a knock at the door. Mills entered with a note upon a salver. Henry took it up, glanced questioningly at his wife, and tore open the envelope.

"There will be no answer, Mills," he said.

The man withdrew. Sir Henry read the lines thoughtfully.

Police-station, Draymarsh.

Sir,

According to enquiries made I find that Mr. Hamar Lessingham arrived at the Hotel this evening in time for dinner. His luggage arrived by rail yesterday. It is presumed that he came by motor car, but there is no car in the garage, nor any mention of one. His room was taken for him by Miss Fairclough, ringing up for Lady Cranston about 7 o'clock.

Respectfully yours,

JOHN MATLOCK.

"To your note of interest?" Philippa inquired.

"In a sense, yes," he replied, thrusting it into his waistcoat pocket. "I presume we can consider our late subject of conversation finished with?"

"I have nothing more to say," she pronounced.

"Well, then," her husband agreed, "let us select another topic. This time, supposing I choose?"

"You are welcome."

"Let us converse, then, about Mr. Hamar Lessingham."

Philippa had taken up her her work. Her fingers ceased their labors, but she did not look up.

"About Mr. Hamar Lessingham," she repeated. "Rather a limited subject, I am afraid."

"I am not so sure," he said thoughtfully. "For instance, who is he?"

"I have no idea," she replied. "Does it matter? He was at college with Richard, and he has been a visitor at Wood Norton. That is all that we know. Surely it is sufficient for us to offer him any reasonable hospitality?"

"I am not disputing it," Sir Henry assured her. "On the face of it, it seems perfectly reasonable that you should be civil to him. On the other hand, there are one or two rather curious points about his coming here just now."

How He Arrived

"Really?" Philippa murmured indifferently, bending a little lower over her work.

"In the first place," her husband continued, "how did he arrive here?"

"For all I know," she replied, "he may have walked."

"A little unlikely. Still, he didn't come from London by either of the evening trains, and it seems that you didn't take his rooms for him until about 7 o'clock, before which time he hadn't been to the hotel. So you see, one is driven to wonder how the mischief he did get here."

"I took his rooms?" Philippa repeated, with a sudden little catch at her heart.

"Someone from here rang up, didn't they?" Sir Henry went on carelessly. "I gathered that we were introducing him at the hotel."

"Where did you hear that?" she demanded.

(To Be Continued.)

The Causes of Pleurisy

By Brice Belden, M. D.

PLEURISY is an inflammation of the pleura, which is the membrane that covers the lungs and inside of the chest walls, and through its lubricating action facilitates the movements of the lungs in respiration.

Each lung has its own pleura, entirely separate from the pleura of the other lung.

Pleurisy may involve a part or the whole of a pleura; it may be acute or chronic, it may result from exposure to cold and wet; it may be secondary to disease in adjacent structure, such as pneumonia and tuberculosis, and it may result from an injury of the ribs.

Many cases of pleurisy are due to tuberculosis, and in about one-fourth of the cases frank symptoms of that disease follow the pleurisy.

A pleurisy may be dry, or there may be fluid formed. In dry pleurisy the membrane becomes red, sticky, lustreless and covered with a thin film. Continuation of the inflammation results in the pouring out of an excess of fluid—a few ounces to several pints, which in favorable cases is gradually absorbed.

There is an intermediate form, in which, instead of fluid, there is an accumulation of butterlike material (fibrinous pleurisy) that subsequently undergoes a change, leading to dense adhesions, so that chronic, permanent pleural thickening results.

Empyema is a special form of pleurisy, in which the fluid, instead of being watery, is composed of pus. This is a surgical disease. It often follows pneumonia.

The Winter Hat Makes Its Appeal

An unusual hat, typically Russian in effect, developed in brown satin and beaver fur, each forming alternate panels. A huge ornament is the only trimming.

In the best taste is this hat of blue, taupe, brown or black velvet with moire topped brim. The fur is made in the new shawl fashion of skunk and is reasonable in price.

About Buying on Credit

By Loretto C. Lynch

"IF I were the kind of woman who bought things on the instalment plan, I could rent out rooms, too. But everything in my house was paid for before it came in. I don't believe in buying things on time, for I have heard that you pay more for them in that way," concluded Mrs. Brown.

"Well, it seems that if wealthy people buy things on credit, and have the use of them for some time before they are really paid for we poor folks might follow their use," answered her neighbor.

The neighbor was of foreign birth. Ten years before a flood had completely destroyed her little home as well as the small country roadhouse so familiar to the European traveler. And when the shock was over she and her husband turned their eyes to the country where there was a chance for every one willing to work. They turned their eyes toward America. Transportation paid, they had less than $100 to start life anew in the new world.

"How did you manage?" we inquired eagerly.

"Instead of paying cash for a few pieces of cheap furniture, we went to a credit house and bought the beginnings of the home we now have," she told us.

They first bought a bed with good springs and mattress. Next came blankets and sheets and pillow cases. They purchased a small unpainted table and two chairs. These with a few kitchen articles were the essentials.

Then these thrifty people began to figure. They decided that if Joe could get a workman to take the unfurnished parlor for a bedroom they would be able to reduce their rent considerably. They were paying $30 per month for the apartment. And so this thrifty woman, instead of buying a lot of cheap, trashy, impossible parlor furniture, went to the credit house and selected a single bed, a well-made dresser, a chair and two small rugs.

She arranged to pay $10 a month until these articles were paid for. The room rented for $15 a month. In a short time these things were all paid for, and then she could subtract the full $15 each month from her rent.

Gradually she furnished other rooms, but only with well-made furniture. Today hers is a really beautiful home.

With the new draft so many untrained women find themselves left with a house or an apartment on their hands that it will be worth while to look into the matter of reducing their own living quarters to a minimum and renting the extra available space for sleeping quarters.

Almost every town in America where there are war workers or cantonments could accommodate larger numbers of people if the women of the town will look upon this rooming proposition as a war emergency. The credit houses will make almost any arrangement you desire to let you have the necessary extra beds and furniture.

Think it over, housewives! Here is a job you can take without either breaking up your homes or leaving it for outside work.

When a Girl Marries

A NEW SERIAL OF YOUNG MARRIED LIFE

By Ann Lisle

Copyright,1918, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

CHAPTER X.—Continued

BEFORE I could reply, Neal burst out enthusiastically. His faith in himself had been quite restored by Phoebe's evident admiration.

"Say, folks, make your plans without the junior members of the family for tomorrow night. Phoebe and I are going on a party with Evelyn Mason and Sheldon Blake."

"Jim, are those the Masons who once lived next to us?" asked Virginia with lifted eyebrows.

"The same. Don't you remember Tom and his little cousin, Evvy?"

"Evvy!" I knew that Virginia was recalling to mind the affair between Jim and Evelyn, though she said no more than the girl's name.

"No, Phoebe, dear—Mr. Hyland must make his plans without including you. You are far too young, dear, to go to his—parties."

Again Virginia had eliminated Neal from her scheme of things—brushed him aside.

"Come, Phoebe," she said, and swept into my bedroom to get her hat and furs.

Phoebe rose, her eyes tear-filled. She took a step forward, then drew back, gave her own pain and remembering his hurt, she turned and slipped her hand into Neal's with a quick little confiding gesture.

"I'm sorry, Neal," said Phoebe. "I'd—I'd be glad to go anywhere you took me."

CHAPTER XI.

"BEAT this job! Why does it have to begin in the middle of the night?" growled Jim as he made ready to hurry off to work.

"A fellow ought to be Johnny-on-the-spot the first morning after his sisters arrive! I don't suppose the girls are awake yet, but I hate to start out for the day without even saying good-morning to Virginia. You'll be sure and call her up by ten, won't you, Anne?"

But Virginia and Phoebe had left the Rochambeau when I phoned at just ten, and they hadn't said when they would be back again. So I left no message.

I stayed in all day waiting for some word from them, but none came. At six the phone rang for the first time in a long, lonesome day. When I took down the receiver Jim's voice greeted me:

"I'm at the Rochambeau, Anne; got off an hour early and stopped to see Virginia. She says she hasn't heard from you all day."

There was reproach in his voice.

"Oh, Jim, dear, I 'phoned at ten and the operator said that Virginia and Phoebe had gone out leaving no message, so I didn't leave word either—I thought it wasn't any use!" I cried.

"I'm sorry, dear," said Jim again. "I think I'll have to make up to Virginia for our lack of attention by going with her now to look at two apartments she has seen. She can't quite decide which to take, and as I'm not free during the day she arranged with the agent to let me see them between seven and eight."

"Oh, Jim, won't you be home to supper?" I gasped.

"How can I, Anne? Now, don't be unreasonable, dear. You'll not be alone; Neal will be there, won't he? So I'll have dinner with Virginia and Phoebe and then run out with them to see the apartment. That's the only thing to do, isn't it?"

"I suppose so," I agreed, but as I spoke and while Jim was saying good-bye I wondered would he have asked me to join him and his sisters even if Neal hadn't been there.

An Angry Neal

I turned away with a feeling of numbness. And it wasn't until I heard a wild buzzing a few minutes later that I realized I had forgotten to hang up the receiver. I hurried to the 'phone, but got the tantalizing old reply:

"Number's on one on the line now. If they ring again I'll call you."

Carefully I put the receiver in its place this time and turned away, telling myself with feverish insistence that it had been Jim calling to assure me that he missed his "Princess Anne."

Velveteen Frocks

By Rita Stuyvesant

MORE women are choosing velveteen frocks this season than ever before, perhaps. They are chosen not only for their soft richness, but also for the patriotic pride that one feels at conserving wool. And such delightful models, too, are being shown that they are a real temptation. Bits of embroidery, yards and yards of silk braid, silk sashes or some fringe all help to make these frocks unusually attractive.

If you cannot buy one of the smart models that the shops are showing, very likely you can remake that old-style velvet suit of yours into an up-to-date street dress.

One clever girl recently showed me a beautiful velveteen frock that she had fashioned from an old suit. It was a beautiful shade of green and was made with a straight full peplum and narrow skirt.

First she carefully ripped the lining and interlining from the coat, and removed the peplum. The centre back was cut down and the front basted together. Then she slipped on the blouse and carefully fitted the front with "darts." A round neck was marked out and cut. Bits of silver embroidery beautifully camouflaged the front seam and added to the trimming of this simple frock. Small covered buttons closed the back.

The peplum was turned around, so that the opening would come in the back. For variety, the corners were rounded off gracefully. Where the blouse and peplum joined there was a lovely crushed girdle of dull green satin. The skirt was made a little narrower and attached to the blouse under the peplum.

Economy demands that you conserve materials, and especially woolen goods. Old fashioned frocks and suits may be made up into advanced styles with considerable saving. Clear out your wardrobe and remodel it, as both fashion and patriotism demand.

Nothing Doing

Mr. Smith, dissatisfied with his house, put the sale of it in the hands of an estate agent.

A few days later he saw an advertisement of a house exactly answering his needs. The more he read of its beauty and comfort the more anxious he was to secure it for himself.

So he called up the estate agent with: "There is a house advertised in the News by A. B. C. See A. B. C. and buy it from him.

"Sorry," was the laconic reply, "but I'm 'A. B. C.,' and the house is your own."

As to Stepchildren

SOME OLD THEORIES EXPLODED

The Stepmother Often Proves to Be the Saving Grace in the Family of Today

By Beatrice Fairfax

I WONDER if some of the difficulties set forth in a letter I have just received do not exist in a great many homes where the factors of a second marriage and stepchildren have complicated the household situation.

And I wonder how many women, in such cases, have the courage to hold for years to their own view of duty and responsibility, as my correspondent has done, whatever it may cost them—and it has cost her a good deal.

If your second husband, naturally preferring the young children of whom you and he were the parents, came to dislike and even persecute your own older daughter, the child of your first marriage, and even made her banishment from the home the price of your domestic peace—what would you do, oh conscientious and tender-hearted woman reader?

I will let her tell her own story:

"About fourteen years ago I was left a widow with a child of four. I was able to work, but my employer promised to be a father to my little girl, and so I married him. I now have two other children, aged nine and four.

"Five years ago my husband lost all he had by gambling. The bread box was empty. We opened a store, in which my thirteen-year-old daughter, my husband and myself worked day and night. As we prospered in this business my husband made my daughter give up day school and tried to prevent her going to evening school. He would allow her no amusement. Many a time he threatened to strike her. Finally he told me that either she must get out of the house or he would.

"How could I let a sixteen-year-old girl, unable to take care of herself, leave her home, even if she were not my child? Many people have told me that I should have let her go, since my husband could not understand her. But I am sure, Miss Fairfax, you would not think so.

"Now my husband has been away two years. My daughter is in an office and I support the children, but I am failing in health and they do not receive proper care. They need a father's protection. I wait, hope and pray. What shall I do? Have I done right in letting my own child stay with me?"

What Would You Do?

Frankly, I don't think even conscientious women would agree about a situation of this sort. Many, I am sure, would take the practical view that the peace of the home must be preserved at all hazards, and that if a stepchild proved, however innocently, to be the disturbing element, that element must be removed. They would advise the mother, in a spirit of compromise, to make the best provision possible for the unwanted child so that the rest of the family, at least, could live in happiness and sympathy.

Other women, holding the old-fashioned view that a woman owes her husband absolute submission in everything, will insist that whatever maternal agony she might suffer a wife must allow her husband to dictate the membership of the household, even if it involves sending a defenceless young girl out into the world alone.

A mother can do no more than follow her own idea of what is right, wherever it may lead her. But I find myself in especial sympathy with this particular mother who for so many years has stuck fast to her belief that a woman isn't justified in abandoning her own child.

Just think for a moment of the pressure that must have been brought to bear on her. Think what it meant to resist, year after year, her relentless enemy, the husband who didn't want to tolerate another man's child at his hearthstone—even a child who, by every standard, was all her energy to keep this heartstone warm. Think what it meant to face the prospect of the husband's desertion, and his withdrawal of support for the children, and the disapproval of friends and neighbors.

A Heroine

You may believe this woman was totally wrong, but you must admit she was a heroine. I wish I could believe that there are many of us who so thoroughly live up to our convictions when the penalty to be paid is so severe. And I don't know any better fortune for a child than to have a mother who takes motherhood in this spirit.

I think, of course, that the situation this courageous mother has described is an extreme one. Stepchildren are often the cause of misunderstandings, but rarely, I believe, of such tragic rupture as this. But for the very reason that it is extreme, I wish widows—yes, and wives—would study it and take warning.

GIVE A BASKET

Boston's response to the appeal of the Boston AMERICAN'S Christmas Basket Fund is coming in with characteristic generosity, but slowly.

The list of letters from destitute widows and children grows faster than the list of contributions to meet the need and the balance is too large on the side of Necessity and too small on the relief side of the ledger.

To correct this standing and to wipe out the deficit now payable to Poverty is the privilege of Boston's people through this fund.

It has been suggested by a well known Bostonian, who has contributed to this fund a check for $25 under a pseudonym and who does not wish his name used, that, if the armistice is signed and the fighting stops abroad, every family of a soldier show their gratitude by contributing enough to take care of one case of need here at home.

SOLDIERS' FAMILIES IN NEED.

This gentleman's suggestion is a good one except that he overlooked the fact that it is unfortunately true that many of the wives of soldiers will be beneficiaries of this fund.

But if he had said that every family who could afford it ought to adopt a poor widow and family of little children for Christmas Day and see that they were amply supplied with a Christmas dinner, his suggestion would be a wise one.

Why not?

Many families of soldiers here in Boston would have sent to their men in France, except for the government ban, more than enough to buy a Christmas basket for a poor widow.

Why not use that money anyway for this good cause?

If people could see and read the hundreds of pitiful letters which come pouring in each hour from destitute families they would agree to do this or to do anything to help these needy ones.

CHILDREN HELPING FUND.

Boston's boys and girls, members of the Junior Committee, are starting very well indeed. Dimes and quarters and some fifty cent pieces in a small but grateful stream are beginning to flow into the office of the fund in the Little Building.

Boys and girls are being supplied with buttons by the Boston AMERICAN, indicating that they are helping out this cause.

These buttons should be applied for immediately because in a very short time every right minded boy and girl in Boston will be wearing them and those who had them first will have reason to be very proud.

Warmth is necessary.—be well clothed.
Sleep well, eat well, play well.
Avoid over-exertion.
Do not let yourself get run-down.
Those who are weak and run-down are the earliest victims.
Remember that Father John's Medicine makes fighting strength to ward off the attacks of the grip germs.
Keep away from houses where there are cases of influenza.
A neglected cold leads to grip or pneumonia. Take Father John's Medicine at the first sign of a cold. It has had more than 60 years of success treating colds and coughs.
Do not take medicine containing narcotic drugs, derivatives of opium or other poisons. You are safe when you take Father John's Medicine because it is guaranteed free from alcohol or dangerous drugs.

NUXATED IRON

"To help make strong, keen-red-blooded Americans there is nothing in my experience which I have found so valuable as organic iron—Nuxated Iron," says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (outdoor dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital. Nuxated Iron often increases the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, run-down people in two weeks' time. It is now being used by over three million people annually, including such men as Hon. Leslie M. Shaw, formerly Secretary of the Treasury and ex-Governor of Iowa; former United States Senator and Vice-Presidential nominee, Charles A. Towne; General John Lapham (Retired), the drummer boy of Shiloh, who was sergeant in the first regular Army when only 12 years of age; United States Judge Peter S. College football was to be resumed in the Stadium this afternoon after a lapse of two years, the Harvard and Tufts S. A. T. C. elevens going to war.

The Harvard team has come fast during the week, and with a rushline somewhat heavier than Tufts, was expected to vanquish, or at least hold their own, with the speedy visitors.

In addition, Reggie Brown and Bob Guild, Harvard coaches, have tipped their charges off to the kind of formations that may be expected from Tufts, and the Cambridge team has been drilled accordingly.

Ben Hunneman, of last year's Greenough & Noble team, was expected to shine at fullback. Hunneman has all the requisites of a good back, punts and drop kicks well, and is a whale on the defensive.

Russ Porter, a Dorchester boy, and Goldstein, from Springfield, were the halfbacks, with Art Conlon at quarterback.

There was to be no place for a nervous man in the Tufts lineup, with Jim McManmon and Pinkie Brown, 190-pounders in action, while the remainder of the Crimson was well above the 160-pound mark.

Tufts presents a veteran lineup, with Captain Lincoln, Evander, Cahoon and Conlan of last year's team. Art Carleton, Everett lineman, who played every minute of the seven games on the Muhlenberg college schedule last Fall; Galloway and Blair of Colby Academy, and Doherty, one of last year's all-interscholastic ends.

OPEN NEW CLUBHOUSE AT BELMONT SPRING

Belmont Spring Country Club will formally dedicate the new clubhouse tonight, with a dinner and dance to follow it. The new home of the club is unquestionably the best appointed in the State.

As a result of the work of the building committee the membership of the club are in much better condition as regards home conditions than was the case prior to the fire that destroyed the original building.

Today was devoted to two tournaments for members, one for the ladies and the other for the men. The ladies played the best selected nine holes at one-third handicap. The men will play a four-ball handicap, with three-quarters allowed. Prizes will be given.

Newport, R. I., Nov. 9.—The naval football championship of the first and second districts was to be decided this afternoon when the Naval Radio eleven from Harvard opposed the Second Naval District team on Pressey Street Field.

The visitors have the better record, having won all five of their contests, while Newport has been forced during its past two contests to take the backwash of Saipaolis and Hampton Roads.

Coach Fred Walker, whose classy Williams team last Fall was among the intercollegiate leaders, was confident his machine would recover from its slump and give the haughty visitors a good thumping.

B. C. STARS IN LINEUP AGAINST BUMKIN ISLAND

Boston College was to clash with Bumkin Island at University Heights this afternoon; play at 2:30. Captain Morrissey, Louis Urban, Phil Corrigan, Frank Hannon, Walter Collins and the rest of the Maroon and Gold stars were underlined to be in action. McKlaney and Bridges were first picked to start at the two halfback positions.

Bumkin Island has a compact line with Wright, Martin, Broderick and Lattangi its backfield quartet.

EGLINGTON MAKES CLEAN SWEEP OF ARENA CARD

A. Eglington, claimant of the international roller-skating championship, won both the half-mile and five-mile events at the Arena, the latter race he defeated J. Nebes, New England champion, after a stirring struggle. It was the first time Nebes has been beaten in this section. Eglington's time in the mile event, which was a new mark for the Arena, Charley Lambert of Boston annexed the half-mile novice race.

REDDY BEATS CURRIE IN WINDUP EVENT AT C. A. C.

Young Geula of Woonsocket, substituting for Young Otto of Chelsea, took a nice, neat trimming from Mike Paulson in the ten-round semi-final.

Young Bruno of East Boston defeated Kid Francis of Lawrence in six rounds, and the Fully Kid of Lawrence and Louis Alfredo of East Boston went to a draw in the curtain-raiser.

JOHNNY BUCKLEY'S PALS BID HIM HAPPY GOOD-BY

George (Johnny) Buckley, prominent South Boston lightweight, and one of the signalmen of George Freeman's string of boxers, who leaves for Camp Sanitary cantonment, Monday, was tendered a farewell party by a contingent of his friends. He was the recipient of a complete khaki outfit, wrist watch included.

Buckley has made good work in the ring since quitting the amateur ranks; in fact, ranks well to the fore among the section's army of soldier-sailors in the lightweight division.

FERGUSON IS A SET-UP FOR GEORGE ROBINSON

George Robinson, Cambridge middleweight, matchased Danny Ferguson of Philadelphia at the Marlboro Driving Club, and the bout, scheduled to go twelve rounds, was stopped at the end of the fourth. Johnny Realdine of Camp Edgar won from Billy Burke of Lynn in eight rounds, and Young Dempsey of East Boston outpointed Young McKuna of Worcester in the six-round curtain-raiser.

Ten Years Ago in Sport

YALE COACHES give varsity eleven big shake-up, as they are displeased with the result of the Brown game. Seven of the eleven regulars have been deposed.

* * *

IN COMMENTING upon boxers, Billy Delaney, old time handler, said: "I wouldn't have a fighter who was not there with a good left." (Local boys should take Billy's advice.)

* * *

JIM BARRY is hot on the trail of Al Kaufman and is willing to bet $1,000 he can beat the big Californian the first and second districts was to be decided this afternoon when the Naval Radio eleven from Harvard opposed the Second Naval District team on Pressey Street Field.

The visitors have the better record, having won all five of their contests, while Newport has been forced during its past two contests to take the backwash of Saipaolis and Hampton Roads.

Coach Fred Walker, whose classy Williams team last Fall was among the intercollegiate leaders, was confident his machine would recover from its slump and give the haughty visitors a good thumping.

* * *

IN HIS twelve years of professional baseball, Honus Wagner has never failed to break into the charmed .300 mark as a batter (This fellow must have been quite a ball player. Any of the members reading this?)

* * *

FRED LAKE says the ball thrown by Eddie Cicotte is a harder ball to hit than the spitter. Cicotte uses his finger ball instead of saliva to deceive the batsmen.

* * *

CHARLEY COMISKEY is out with the statement that Billy Sullivan will manage the White Sox in case Fielder Jones makes good his threat to retire. (Who did manage the Sox? That's four different entries.)

* * *

JIMMY COLLINS has practically closed a deal for the purchase of the Buffalo (Eastern League) Club. (That Collins boy was a neat one. Remember him at third base out on Huntington avenue?)

* * *

PAUL COBB, kid brother of Ty, is to be given a try-out by Jimmy McAleer. Many of the experts declare the kid won't amount to much. (We might say the experts were right.)

* * *

TOMMY GUILL and Young Longhrey are both in fine fettle for their 12-round bout tomorrow night at the Armory A. A., while Jerry Gaines with his harmaker is waiting for Bill McKinnon. (What did he do with it?)

* * *

YOUNG CORBETT meets Fred Corbett for second battle at the State A. C., Philadelphia, next Friday night. (Corbett, if he doesn't win, should at least get a draw.)

* * *

KID BROAD, writing from Denver, where he is playing with a burlesque show, says he expects to start out in a monologue in a month or so. (You'd have to be acquainted with the Kid to see the joke in that statement.)

REGULAR—As the high leather boots with the brass toes were out of date in your time, you do not qualify as an old-timer. Those were the happy days. Remember the old bestback, Boy?
